Much for Science
Can It Aid Government?
Napoleon's Square
60 Should Be Young

By ARTHUR BRISBANE

Newton D. Baker, Secretary of War in the "big" war, tells graduating students of the Massachusetts Institute of Technology it is their duty to "carry science into politics." Scientists, Mr. Baker thought, must seek for "the solution of world problems, when the great international crisis comes, as it surely will come."

A sufficient "great crisis" seems to be here now, with many countries wanting to fight each other, different classes already fighting each other, and in this—richest country in the world—ten million human beings living practically on charity.

If that is not a real crisis, few would care to see one.

Mr. Baker thinks people are attracted by Father Coughlin and Mr. Townsend by "a belief that what they promise ought to be true, because they are so enticing in their unscientific aspects."

It would be pleasant if scientists, as such, would solve government problems, and dispose of "great crises." But is there really any reason to think they could do so?

Newton was a great scientist, certainly; but it is related that his only contribution to scientific government was limited to a suggestion that a broken window-pane be replaced.

Einstein might, if he chose, prove to you that the "square of the hypothenuse" does not exist, and there is an pons asinorum.

But, if you asked him how to solve the money question, he would reply:

"How do I know?"

Men that have dealt with great crises and public affairs have not usually been scientists. One who tells you, "I could read and write and cipher to the rule of three, and that was all of my education at the age of 22," dealt with one crisis ably. That was Abraham Lincoln.

Oliver Cromwell, no scientist, knew how to rule in a crisis, cutting off a head and then taking charge himself.

Bismarck was no scientist, but he made Germany an empire, and he would have avoided trouble for many Germans if he could have lived forever.

Science calls for scientists, and government in a crisis calls for force of character, decision, common sense and action.

On his expedition to Egypt, Napoleon took along a group of the ablest scientists of his day, thinking it would add to his dignity.

When fighting began, he formed a hollow square and ordered "donkeys and scientists in the center," wishing to protect them. The scientists were superior to the donkeys, and also superior to Napoleon, but not for fighting.

Science deals with the abstract, common sense and experience deal with the concrete and practical.

A scientist is said once to have put his watch in boiling water, holding an egg in his hand for about three minutes, looking intently at the egg. That absence of mind might indicate a great scientist, but it would not do for a man in charge of government.

George Bernard Shaw, not yet 80, says:

"I must give up public speaking, I am too old."

That surprises you from a Celt and an Irishman. At eighty many men have been vigorous in thought and body; for instance, Pope Leo, Von Moltke, Gladstone, and Michelangelo.

Not one of these, however, suffered from handicaps that have aged George Bernard Shaw prematurely; he is a vegetarian and a teetotaler. Youth and strength reside in a saddle of four-year-old mutton and good, light claret, greatly diluted with water.

LAY 3 DEATHS TO LACK OF FIREMEN

HERO FATHER, 2 PERISH; 5 HURT

Charges that the fire department is greatly undermanned, and that one piece of apparatus responded with only the driver as a crew, followed the deaths of two children and their self-sacrificing father in a Charlestown blaze.

Five other persons were injured or burned as the flames swept a three-story tenement building in Chelsea street.

The dead are:

CHANDLER, ROGER, four.

CHANDLER, OLNEY, 25, widower who died attempting to save

CHANDLER, ETHEL, five.

In a scathing statement following the fire, City Councillor James J. Mellen of Charlestown charged Mayor Mansfield and the council had ignored a request made by Mellen six weeks ago that funds be provided for employment of 200 additional firemen, in the averting of just such a catastrophe.

PLEA REJECTED

"Nothing was done about it on the plea that the city could not afford to appoint the men," said Councillor Mellen.

"This morning, as I had long anticipated, came a disastrous fire in my district. It found the Charlestown fire apparatus so greatly undermanned that District Chief Philip A. Tague had

SALTONSTALL WINS FIRST VOTE TEST

By BERNARD J. DOHERTY
Boston Evening American Staff Writer

Springfield, June 19—In a turmoil of excitement and with partisan feeling running riot, the Republican state convention today got down to the business of nominating its state ticket and candidate for United States Senate.

While managers of former State Treasurer John W. Haigis were claiming enough votes to block Speaker Leverett Saltonstall of Newton for the governorship on the first ballot, Saltonstall was confident the initial test of strength would see him safely across.

The appearance of Haigis on the platform was the signal for a

HOPKINS GAGS WPA, DEFIES COURT RULE

Copyright, 1936, by Boston Evening American.

National Administrator Harry L. Hopkins has clamped a "gag" on all Works Progress Administration executives and employes, it was learned today.

An official letter from Hopkins to all state administrators, including Massachusetts Administrator Paul Edwards, contains the "gag" order.

The national chief of the Federal bureau even goes so far as to forbid all the thousands of workers under his command to testify in court on certain matters which he thinks should be kept secret.

MUST HAVE HIS O. K.

For generations lawyers have been exempted from giving testimony about matters confidentially told them by their clients, but Administrator Hopkins has taken it upon himself, as this order shows, to establish another class of exempted persons, in defiance of the court.

The order, dated June 2, instructs

Former District Attorney Thomas C. O'Brien has agreed to seek the Democratic nomination for the United States Senate with the Rev. Charles E. Coughlin's organization support, O'Brien told the Boston Evening American today.

The former Suffolk county prosecutor's statement was in answer to a report from New York that a third party slate with the names of Congressman William Lemke of North Dakota and O'Brien as party choices for President and vice-president was being prepared.

This report came as Fr. Coughlin, the radio priest, was making ready for delivering his radio speech tonight.

WORKS PROGRESS ADMINISTRATION

Harry L. Hopkins
Administrator

General Letter No. 36

TO: All State Works Progress Administrators.

SUBJECT: Release of Official Information or Records.

In all cases where a WPA officer or employee is requested to testify in regard to matters of an official or confidential character, knowledge of which was acquired in his official capacity, he shall respectfully decline to answer. If his reasons are requested by the court or body conducting the hearing, he shall courteously state that the matter is privileged and can not be disclosed without specific approval from the Federal Administrator.

Whenever requested to testify in matters of an official or confidential character, a Works Progress Administration employe must decline to do so, says Hopkins. He demands such requests be referred to him even though he is outside state jurisdiction. As one arm of the present administration ignores the civil service, another challenges the courts.

This is the official letter-head of National Works Progress Administrator Harry L. Hopkins, under which he places a "gag" on every man and woman under his command, in Massachusetts and throughout the country, in defiance of the courts and all other authorities seeking information on Federal relief matters.

HOPKINS DEFIES COURTS, GAGS ALL WPA AIDES

Works Progress Administration officials and employes to "decline to answer" if they should be asked in court about matters connected with their work.

Hopkins instructs all to state that the matter is "privileged" and cannot be talked about without specific approval of the federal administration—who is Hopkins himself.

There is no authority either in common law tradition or under any federal or state statute for such a refusal to obey a command of a court, issued in the interest of public justice.

Some comment on it among Works Progress Administration employes called it similar to the effort of Roosevelt campaign chiefs to force Federal employes to sell "nominator certificates" in evident contravention of Civil Service rules.

ORDER GIVEN IN FULL

"In one case politics, and in the other case bureaucracy, asserts itself as paramount to American law and tradition," said one worker.

The official order from Hopkins, a copy of which is in the possession of this newspaper, reads in full as follows:

Walker-Johnson Building
1734 New York Avenue NW
Washington, D. C.
June 2, 1936.

Harry L. Hopkins,
Administrator,

GENERAL LETTER NO. 36

TO: All State Works Progress Administrators.

SUBJECT: Release of Official Information or Records.

No officer or employe of the Works Progress Administration shall furnish any information or make available any official document or paper, or copy thereof, to any person, except persons having official business with the Works Progress Administration.

"DECLINE TO ANSWER"

In all cases where documents or records are subpoenaed, the issuing officer or body shall be informed that such documents can be furnished only upon order of the federal administrator and that the request should be addressed to him. A full report outlining the information desired and the circumstances must be immediately forwarded by the proper Works Progress Administration officer to the federal administrator.

In all cases where a WPA officer or employe is requested to testify in regard to matters of an official or confidential character, knowledge of which was acquired in his official character, he shall respectfully decline to answer. If his reasons are requested by the court or body conducting the hearing, he shall courteously state that the matter is privileged and cannot be disclosed without specific approval from the federal administrator.

It is not the intent of these instructions to withhold information regarding the Works Progress Administration, but to affirm the fact that the disclosing of official documents or records of the Works Progress Administration is a question to be decided only by the Federal Administrator.

(Signed)
HARRY L. HOPKINS
Administrator

It was pointed out that this order, if carried out, would preclude any investigation of the Works Progress Administration, except with Hopkins' consent.

WOULD FACE JAIL

Moreover, in cases coming up in the state courts, Hopkins, being outside their jurisdiction, could not be forced to appear in court, and if the employes of his bureau here refused to testify, the court would be powerless to obtain the desired information.

It was the view of lawyers, to whom the order was revealed, that federal employes obeying this order in any specific court case would be adjudged in contempt of court and subject to jail terms.

Another move of Hopkins is a nation-wide mass meeting of relief staff employes, scheduled for Saturday afternoon, at which, over the radio, he will reveal the administration's relief plans after the end of the present program, June 30.

Although this is a matter of general concern, Hopkins chooses to make his first announcement this way, with all relief workers assembled, similar to a political convention.

MEETING IN BOSTON

The Boston meeting will be at the Shubert Theater, from 4:15 to 5:30 p. m., with State Administrator Edwards delivering a "pep" talk in advance of the broadcast.

Under orders from higher authority, each department head in the Massachusetts relief organization has instructed his employes that they must attend this meeting. Many of them expressed indignation, due to the time of the gathering, Saturday is generally a half-holiday. The employes frankly said they feared discharge if they did not attend.

At the same time, taxpayers, if they wish to stay at home to tune in their radios, will be enabled to learn what the relief czar has planned to do with his next huge allotment of funds. Under the present bureaucratic form of government operation, he can do virtually as he pleases.

ORDERS ALL ATTEND

Following is the wording of the circular which has been distributed to all administrative employes here:

"To all Administrative Employes:

"A staff meeting of all administrative employes of the Works Progress Administration will be held Saturday, June 20, from 5:15 to 5:30 p. m. in the Shubert Theatre.

"This meeting will be part of the nation-wide staff meeting at which time plans for the operation of the Works Progress Administration for the coming year will be explained and discussed by National Works Progress Administrator Harry L. Hopkins and others.

"As efficiency of operation can only be obtained through a thorough knowledge of the problems to be faced by the members of the administration organization, it is of utmost importance that all administrative employes be present at this meeting.

"The Washington part of the program is to be broadcast over the red network of the National Broadcasting Company from 5 to 5:30 p. m. and will be broadcast in Massachusetts through stations WEEI of Boston and WTAG of Worcester.

"The meeting will be in the form of a staff conference between State Administrator Paul Edwards and his staff, comprising Lieutenant-Colonel John J. McDonough, director of the division of employment; John J. Fitzgerald, chief of the division of operations; William F. Husband, Jr., director of finance; Miss Helen G. Talboy, director of women's and white collar projects; Edward L. Casey, National Youth Administration; Colonel Thomas F. Sullivan, director of District 3, and Byrle Osborne, director of District 7."

Roosevelt Is Shy 44 Votes, Hurja Poll Reveals

New York, June 19 (US)—In the face of Postmaster-General Farley's claims that President Roosevelt would carry every state in the Union, Democrats close to the high command today admitted the national leaders were near to panic.

Cause of the unrest among the Democratic chieftains, it was learned, was a report, just submitted to Farley by his chief statistician and first assistant, Emil Hurja.

According to the Hurja report, the Democrats can lay claim legitimately to only 222 electoral votes. That is 44 less than enough to assure the re-election of the national ticket.

CORRECT IN PAST

The Hurja figures would have created something less than the sensation they did had he not in the past been so uniformly correct.

Hurja, as has been frequently pointed out by the Democratic organization, does not rely on guesswork. His predictions are based entirely on the results of figures gathered by a nation-wide network of informants.

In addition to the 222 electoral votes he is now claiming, Hurja has itemized approximately 100 more votes by states, out of which he reports the Democrats have an even chance of gaining the necessary 44 for victory.

In his list of doubtful states, Hurja does not include New York.

LISTS SOUTHERN BLOC

The 222 votes, claimed as certain for Roosevelt by Hurja include 113 votes in the solid southern bloc.

Hurja's list of "doubtful" states from which it is hoped the Democrats will be able to gather in 44 votes include, California, Minnesota, Maryland, Oklahoma, Missouri, Wisconsin, Tennessee, West Virginia and Iowa.

Among the states with the larger number of electoral votes to which Hurja, at this time, makes no claims save to list them as "bad news" for Farley are New York, 47 votes; Massachusetts, 17; Michigan, 19; Ohio, 26 and Pennsylvania, 36.

that time to make the fight for senator from Massachusetts, with support of the radio priest and his National Union for Social Justice.

This afternoon Attorney O'Brien was closeted with a number of political allies in his office at 11 Beacon street.

Meanwhile, Representative Lemke, co-author of the Frazier-Lemke farm bill, was reported from Washington as remaining away from his office and going into conference with advisors elsewhere to determine if he should make a public statement of his candidacy before Fr. Coughlin's radio address tonight.

Supporters of the radio priest, according to the New York report, "were frankly worried as to what Lemke's decision might be."

The canon law of the Catholic church, it was pointed out, not only bars a priest from being a candidate himself, but does not allow him to form or lead a political party.

father, Rev. Norman Brighton of Natick, but she's coming back again.

"I quit my job, selling handkerchiefs in a New York department stor, because I was homesick," she explained. "I may be back for good in a few days. I'd like to get a job here on a cosmetic counter."

Norma hasn't fallen in love yet, she maintained, but she might.

"And if I did I'd get married," she added. "I don't see any reason why I shouldn't."

She didn't mind talking, but she got positively upset when a photographer flashed his camera.

"Don't do that," she said. "I've bobbed my hair short and I'm trying to look different than I did. I don't want people to be always saying;

"'That's the girl in the Needham murder case.'"

For all of that, however, Norma asked about Rose and Frances Millen, sisters of the youth she married. He and his brother, Irving, and Abraham Faber were executed last summer for the double slaying at the Needham bank robbery.

The girl-widow isn't any prouter or thinner, but she's changed, matured. She wore a stylish blue and gray ensemble—blue straw hat, blue dress, blue gabardine shoes and gray coat trimmed with gray fox.

She smoked cigarettes continuously while she talked with the Boston Evening American reporter, but she said she's in good health and happy.

"And I get around quite a bit, too," she remarked.

Saltonstall Nomination Predicted

vociferous demonstration on the part of his followers and from a big block of local gallery rooters.

A scramble was in progress for about sixty delegates, breaking away from former Attorney General Joseph E. Warner, with Saltonstall men claiming the most of them.

LODGE GAINS REPORTED

Saltonstall adherents let out a mighty roar as their champion entered the arena, with the added break of having drawn first place in the order of nominations.

Lieutenants of former Mayor Sinclair Weeks were in a panic as reports flew thick and fast through the convention hall that delegates were breaking away from the Weeks camp and going over to Representative Henry Cabot Lodge of Beverly in the Senatorship battle.

The convention accepted the platform, amended to favor flood control projects. Proposed planks condemning dog racing and curtailment of hours of dispensing liquor, proposed by a Lynn attorney, were definitely rejected.

A telegram from Governor Alfred M. Landon, the Republican nominee for President, conveying greetings and best wishes to the convention was read by National Committeeman Joseph Martin.

MESSAGE FROM LANDON

"All of us know of your own good work and of the fine example set by the Republicans of Massachusetts in behalf of the party and of the nation," the message read.

"The results in your state show what can be done through effort properly and untiringly applied. They demonstrate the definite desire of the people for good government when they are given the direct choice between good government and bad government at the polls in November. We need have no doubts as to the desire but we must all see to it that every man and woman eligible to vote is given a clear understanding of the issues involved.

"This will be the particular duty of the party workers, a duty which I am confident you will fulfill. I wish you every success."

Resolutions were adopted on the death of Congressman A. Piatt Andrew of Gloucester. While the convention stood, bugles sounded taps.

Resolutions offered by Representative George Demeter of Boston condemning as "a political grab" the distribution of $1 Democratic presidential nominator tickets among federal employes was adopted with cheers.

The resolution read: "Whereas, Postmaster-General Farley, by letter, over his signature, has solicited money from federal employes with which to finance the Roosevelt campaign, and,

"Whereas, it is against the law for federal employes to use their official authority or influence to coerce the political action of any person, and,

"Whereas, such solicitation is punishable under the criminal code and constitutes unlawful political activity;

"Resolved, that the Republican pre-primary convention considers this practice a political grab; condemns such gutter tactics and denounces the scheme as un-American and unprincipled."

Of the 706 accredited delegates to the convention, 698 were reported as present, 350 being necessary for choice. Speaker Saltonstall was put in nomination by Representative Horace T. Cahill of Braintree, Republican floor leader.

Cahill, in an earnest eulogy of Saltonstall as a man "gifted with native New England shrewdness" and one who has never known defeat in his career of 15 years in public office, warned the convention restoration of the seat to the Republican party rests on a wise choice of a leader for the state ticket.

SALTONSTALL PARADE

He vigorously condemned the present Democratic administration and hailed Saltonstall as the man to lead the party "out of the mess." He asserted that leaders are developed in every crisis, recalling the history of Washington, Lincoln, and "when an ill-advised police strike threatened our state institutions," Calvin Coolidge.

"Only a week ago," he continued, "the Republican national convention chose a leader, unknown to us a year ago."

Roosevelt's Wife as Vice-President?

New York, June 19 (AP)—Miss Lillian D. Rock, president of the League for Women for President and Other Public Offices, said today that "it would be a great idea" to nominate Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt as President Roosevelt's running mate.

The League will open convention headquarters in Philadelphia in an endeavor to name a woman for Vice-President at the Democratic convention.

In Haigis, he stated, the state has another distinguished citizen who has come up from the people, with a great record in public service, and beloved by all who know him. He dwelt on western state contributions to the party, naming Calvin Coolidge and the late Senator Murray Crane as outstanding examples.

Haigis rooters cheered as Charles Fairhurst of Greenfield rose to place his name in nomination.

He described Haigis as a man

Mother of 14 Sure She'll Win In $500,000 Stork Marathon

Proof They're In Race To Finish

CONTESTANTS ALL HOPING FOR TWINS

By FRANK CHAMBERLAIN

Copyright, 1936, King Features Synd., Inc.

Toronto, Canada, June 19—In one respect at least, Mrs. Madeline Harrison holds the record over all the other mothers listed as contenders for the half million dollar prize in the great Millar Maternity Marathon.

For all the children borne by Mrs. Harrison to date—and there are fourteen of them—all still alive and well. Each of the other competing mothers has lost one child: one of them as many as twelve, with eleven still living.

But so far as Mrs. Harrison's chances for winning are concerned they now stand one two three it seems. For with only eight children born in the specified time she is in the race with one mother who claims ten but expects no more, three who have nine each and who all have expectations, and two others who now have eight each, of whom one has expectations.

Mrs. Harrison herself expects a visit from the stork about the middle of October. If he brings her only one baby, she is a sure loser in the race; if twins, she has a chance for a tie; if triplets, an excellent chance to win.

Another contender who has eight children born since October 31, 1926, but claims no expectations before the time limit expires, is Mrs. Manuela Darrigo. She is regarded as a "dark horse" in the race, but unless she is keeping back some of the facts to spring as a surprise when the final date arrives, she doesn't appear to have a chance.

Mrs. Harrison, cheerful and philosophical, says it's all in God's hands. She has had twins twice. If twins come in October—well, that might mean a lot to the Harrison family. They're proud of their independence, but they could use to advantage any part of that $500,000.

All of Mrs. Madeline Harrison's 14 children are alive and healthy, and her ninth baby since October, 1926, is due in October.

"I'm praying for twins, or even triplets," the gay, laughing mother says.

Since she has already two sets of twins, and if by luck she should have triplets, another contender must have twins to tie her.

Her husband, Ambrose Harrison, in the early forties, works as a night operator for Toronto's municipally-owned street railway company. They live in a tidy brick house in Pacific avenue and never have had to accept relief, despite the fact it takes eight loaves of bread and a pound of oatmeal every day to feed them.

Papa Harrison cuts the children's hair. Mama Harrison ties up the older girls' hair in curlers every night. Her own hair is "permanently" waved, and she has dimples in her cheeks. She wears a clean, sleeveless cotton dress around the house, and one of the things she would like to buy, if she ever has enough money, is a "nice, stylish house dress."

Mrs. Harrison helps the children with their home work, then plays games with them until bedtime. She doesn't approve of them going to the movies. And she doesn't know what the family would do without Mary, age 18, who is another "mother" to her younger brothers and sisters. Now listen, to Mrs. Harrison name her children:

"Paul, the youngest, was born in 1935; Dorothy came in 1933, and Ann in 1932. There were twins in 1930, Joseph and June. There were twins, too, in 1928, Ambrose and Jimmy. Gloria came in 1927, Madeline in 1925, Teresa in 1924, John in 1922, Winfred in 1921, Patricia in 1920 and Mary first of all in 1918.

"I agree with Mrs. Timleck that the money should be divided among all the mothers with big families. One family wouldn't know how to spend such a big sum."

Favors Split

She was married at 21, and thinks people should marry early so that they can grow up with their children. Whether she wins the Millar will contest or not, she intends to go right on having babies.

"I love them, and they aren't any trouble to have," she says, "and if God wants me to have them, I don't mind a bit."

She prefers having her babies at home, so that she can keep an eye on the other children.

Then there's the Darrigo family. Steffano and Manuela and their 12 children live in Parliament street in five rooms. Manuela Darrigo, who speaks very little English, although she left Italy to come and marry Stefano many years ago, claims to have nine children eligible for the Millar race, although, listed as having only eight. Her last three children have been dead, and Stefano says there will be no more children if he can help it.

"It is too hard on Manuela," he says.

All is woe in this Italian family. Their lives are sad since Stefano lost his three fruit stores, and now he two trucks have had to be sold.

"It's no good," Steffano says. "All work, lots of troubles, have to go on relief."

For awhile he and their eldest girl, Mary, got jobs with another fruit vendor; then he, too, went out of business. Steffano has relatives in the United States, and he balks at allowing photographs to be taken of his children until they have decent clothes to wear.

One after another they have had to give up homes because the rent was too high. Now their furniture is shabby. The radio is broken. The rent is in arrears.

"We've got to get that Millar money," Steffano says in desperation. "We could use it. Then we could stay right here in Toronto, buy three more stores, educate the children, put the older ones in charge of the stores, and we will be O.K. again. My boy, Joe, he's going to be a banana man, aren't you, Joe?" And Joe smiled in agreement.

Steffano turns away, because his eyes are filled with tears. Manuela, weak because she has just lost another baby a few weeks ago, leaves the room and goes into the kitchen. Tall, broad and muscular, Steffano looks wounded and harassed. He could use that half million dollars, or part of it.

$400 Bonus Bonds Found on Trolley

Four hundred dollars in bonus bonds is awaiting the veteran who can prove himself to be "Roy Dwithrow."

The bonds were found on a Boston-Revere "El" street car last Tuesday night by Timothy Corbett, of Prospect avenue, Revere, an "El" employe, who turned them over to Treasurer Henry L. Wilson of the Boston Elevated for safekeeping.

The name "Roy Dwithrow" and the number A4630 were written on the bonds. According to the Veterans' Bureau, the bonds have not been reported lost.

SOLOMON'S TEMPLE

Rebuilt for N. E. Folk to See

"And Jesus said unto them: Verily I say unto you there shall not be one stone left upon another . . ." 2 Matthew, XXIV.

Nor has there been, in the world's history, one stone left upon another in the Temple of Jerusalem that proud Solomon built for Jehovah's chosen people.

Roman legions, attacking under the eagles of their Caesar, Titus, reduced the walls and fortifications of Jerusalem in successive forays.

But through the ingenuity of two Italian artisans of this century, the walled Temple of Jerusalem has been recreated so that all who live in this day may see it as of 1900 centuries ago.

That walled city in 1900 years of biblical record was besieged 40 times, twice under Titus.

For all of this the Boston Evening American and the Boston Sunday Advertiser have contracted for a "Holy Land Exhibit" which will recreate in the minds and eyes of spectators all that time and the Roman legions have destroyed.

The "Holy Land Exhibit," depicting, as the panorama to be shown in miniature at Horticultural Hall from June 30 to July 26 will suggest, is still a narrow strip of land those three provinces—Galilee, Samaria and Judea—as they existed nearly 2000 years ago.

Two famed Italian sculptors, Joseph and Salvatore Gauci, spent 11 years of their lifetimes to recreate the important incidents in the life of the Messiah.

They did not do so for gain, but prevailed upon by American entrepreneurs the unique exhibit was transported here where millions have already been privileged to view it.

WALTER'S WIFE FLIES TO HIS AID

DRAWS $5000 FROM BANK

Love, undaunted by the shadow of the gallows tree, sent Angela Hoskins Walter flying across the continent today to the side of her Boston-born husband.

Despite the fact that Albert Walter, Jr., stands self-accused of the silk stocking slaying of beautiful Blanche Cousins in San Francisco, the wife he abandoned in Greenwich Village will fight for his life.

She withdrew $5000 — her nest egg—from a New York bank, then took a plane for California. It was learned exclusively by the Boston Evening American.

At the same time, Mrs. Albert Walter, Sr., the stepmother who raised the boy from infancy, wrote an appeal for clemency to Governor Frank F. Merriam of California.

She, the boy's father and his wife planned all through the night what they might do to help him now. The parents had met the bride for the first time when she flew here to comfort them.

"She told me over and over she loved Junior," the father related to a Boston Evening American reporter.

"She said she had always loved him and that he was an ideal husband in all except one thing. That was his wanderlust. But she didn't blame him for that.

"I don't blame him either. The poor boy has it in his blood. There have been others, generations back, who brought tragedy to us.

"A grandfather of the boy blew his brains out with a shotgun in a Chicago hotel. The curse of mad impulses is in Albert's blood."

Walter, Jr., meanwhile, was facing superior court in San Francisco, with not only the murder of Blanche Cousins charged to him, but under suspicion for two other similar strangulations.

Only the announced purpose of Public Defender Gerald Kenny—and the cross-country flight of his loyal wife—may yet save the youth from a death cell in San Quentin by nightfall.

The public defender declared today that he would seek to interpose state alienists in the death path. Mrs. Walter will engage counsel and psychiatrists of her own.

But Assistant District Attorney John McMahon insisted that if Walter wants quick punishment, he will get it.

"If he will plead guilty, we'll have him in the death row at San Quentin tonight," he declared.

Two Strangled

The Jeppessen girl was strangled with a silk stocking, as was the Idaho Falls nurse, Miss Cousins. Her body was found in Golden Gate Park two years ago. The Coffman girl was similarly strangled in a waterfront hotel last year.

But Walter's wife can't believe he was even involved in the killing charged to him, let alone the others.

"He was a one-woman man," she said. "He never forgot me. He couldn't help running away, but women never influenced him. I can't understand how he could have gone to Miss Cousins' apartment unless there were overtures to him.

"He never raised a hand to me during the ten months of our marriage, and he didn't even use profanity. He had only one fault—a little boy fault—he wanted to wander."

Mrs. Walter denied that there had been any quarrel when her husband left her on his fateful trip to the west coast. He just dropped out of sight, she said.

The young wife said that she had fallen in love with the man the first time she saw him.

Mrs. Walter declared that even if her own funds run out, she still has well-to-do friends in New York who will help her in her defense.

"I couldn't let Albert die," she said. "He won't, if there is anything in the world I can do for him."

Out in San Francisco, white and discraught, Dorothy Edmonds of Idaho Falls, Idaho, identified the body of Blanche Cousins in the morgue.

"I swore when I came that I wouldn't cry," sobbed Miss Edmonds, a close friend of the slain girl.

"I haven't shed a tear for 24 hours, but I just couldn't hold back any longer."

For seven years Miss Cousins had been bookkeeper at the Latter Day Saints Hospital in Idaho Falls, where Miss Edmonds is dietician.

"Blanche was a good girl. She never had many dates. She didn't seem to care for men. Whenever we went out on dates, we'd have to get her a man," Miss Edmonds said.

"Nice Man"

"She wrote me of this young fellow—Albert Walter, Jr. She called him a very nice young man, but did not mention him by name.

"And to think that he killed her!"

Officers are watching Walter constantly, guarding against a suicide attempt.

He was apparently unmoved by the news that his wife was on her way to him. Neither would he discuss the effect of the news on his father.

"All I want to do its to die and be forgotten," he grimaced. "I don't want to have anything to do with them. (Meaning his family and wife.) "That's all over with now."

He admitted that he must have been in San Francisco at the time of the other two murders, but said:

"I never killed any other woman, though I've always felt subconsciously that I would some day kill a woman.

"I've hated all women since I was 14 years old, when an older woman took advantage of my innocence.

"That wrecked my life, and I've always wanted to be revenged."

Quizzed in Crime

Walter's father, Boston and Medford real estate broker, called upon friends to help raise money for his son's defense, but said he hadn't much success as yet.

"But I know my boy must have been insane if all the things that police say are true," the elder Walter told the Boston Evening American.

"Letters I have received from him recently made me fear before this that his mind was unbalanced. No one in his right mind could have written what Junior wrote to me a month ago."

French Franc Will Not Be Devalued

Paris, June 19 (AP)—Vincent Auriol, minister of finance, declared today in the Chamber of Deputies that the French franc will not be devalued and that France will strive to recover the huge amount of gold and other capital which has been sent abroad.

LISTEN TO THIS! It's typical of what we're hearing from lots of men. "The suit I've been wearing all Spring is too heavy, these days. And summer lightweights are too flimsy. Hasn't anybody something in-between — a real middleweight?" That's a reasonable complaint, and a fair question. And one for which we are glad to now supply a perfect answer, with our new Carolina Worsteds! ★ These long-awaited "middleweights" were loomed by a famous old New England weaver, exclusively for Bond's. Their special construction brings you the cool comfort lacking in regular heavy-weights. Their tightly twisted wool yarns give them more body, and press-holding quality, than summer lightweights. And they feature all the new plaids, chalk-stripes and varsity checks that are getting such a big hand this season. You can put on one of them right now — and wear it, comfortably, all summer. ★ Start enjoying the clothing treat of the year, today or tomorrow. Ask for a Carolina Worsted!

THE SENATOR: Has 'Anti-Nominator' Tickets

am here at a Republican convention is not on account of your letter but because of the Democratic weather the Republicans have to start with and I am afraid the rain will keep so many delegates away there will not be enough for a good fight. What have you got in the bundles and how do things look?"

"Tim y," says the Senator, "All night I am in the backrooms whispering like a combination of the laryngitis and the illicit ice man, and all of the early morning I am in the parades which nobody knows who they are for and now—and now, my friends, with the break of a new day, a glorious new day, and the nation standing at the cross-roads, my eyes are turned to behold, perhaps for the last time, the sun in his Heaven."

Has Tickets, Too

"Senator," says Timmy, twitching the Senator's sleeve, "You have gone into your speech. Drink this and wring yourself out for a chaser. What I ask is not Daniel Webster but only what you have got in the bundles and how does it look for who will be nominated."

"Timmy," says The Senator with great dignity after he has cried into the horse liniment gasper, "I have another stupendous disclosure to make you. You will recall that I was the first to tell you about the tickets that Toastmaster-General Jim Farley is selling to the Democrats who wish to hear President Roosevelt tell them who they nominate him and now it is only fair to let you in on the big follow-up that we doped out last night. That is what I have in the big bundle and it is a little beauty."

At this point The Senator unties his big bundle and what is in it is a lot of tickets that are something like Toastmaster-General Jim Farley is selling to the Democrats who do not wish to be caught not hearing President Roosevelt tell them on the radio why they nominate him, only these tickets which The Senator has are slightly different.

For instance, where Toastmaster-General Farley's tickets say at the bottom, "I want Roosevelt again," these tickets which The Senator has say on them, "I do not want Roosevelt again."

And where Toastmaster-General Farley's tickets say on them, "Admit the bearer to any national Democratic rally," these tickets that The Senator has say on them, "Do not admit the bearer to any rally at all."

"The idea, Timmy," says The Senator, "is this: These tickets will be sold to all who do not wish to gather by the radio to hear President Roosevelt accept his nomination. For a small sum the buyers can get out of hearing the big acceptance speech and spend a week from Saturday night as they see fit, say at the movies, the dog races or merely by the fireside with the radio tuned in on the police short wave.

Higher Rates

"Senator," says Timmy, "that is a very beautiful thought and it should certainly net the Republicans a lot of money. I suppose these tickets are one buck apiece, too."

"Timmy," says The Senator, "you miss the whole idea. These tickets are for the Democrats and not for the Republicans and the price is not one buck apiece but 85 apiece. This is the way that Toastmaster-General Jim Farley can be assured of a very hearty response, getting his boys both coming and going, and be in line with the administration policy of paying the highest prices for not raising any crops.

"Consistency is a great virtue. Besides, the Republicans do not need to have any tickets that will not admit them to any rally and permit them not to listen... The same, Timmy, but a little lighter on the liniment or I will think you have taken out an insurance policy on my life.

"And now, Timmy," says The Senator, "you are asking how things look and I will tell you. After the Republicans snatch the chicken out of the pot at the love feast last night, there is much parley until the early hours trying to get the boys together on a slate that will please all concerned.

"The way it ends up is known as a Swiss Compromise. There are more candidates than ever, and everybody says he will give in if his candidate wins.

Lodge Fights

"Such outstanding citizens as Messrs. Innes, Bottomley, Goulston, Martin, Butler, Hays and Marr are fluttering around like a hen that has hatched a turtle-neck buzzard, and everybody is saying that harmony must be the keynote but nobody will harmonize with the other guy unless the other guy stops singing.

"So what they will do, Timmy, is fight it out on the floor of the convention today and tonight and maybe on the same line all summer because they still think Grant was a Republican.

"Saltonstall is strong on the surface and Haigis is strong underneath, and getting stronger with young Schuster working to line up the young Republicans for him. But even the House pages are working for Levy. Haigis is claiming all but three delegates west of Worcester.

"Mayor George Bates, of Salem, is still a possible compromise only the Innes outfit does not want him on account of his Fuller backing. I am still sure Gaspar Bacon would not take it and I suspect this is because he is more certain that Landon will win than that anyone present can lick Charlie Hurley.

"There was a lot more pressure brought during the night for Henry Cabot Lodge to quit the senatorial contest and be content with the congressman's seat from Essex but he nosed out Sinclair Weeks on a rules committee battle yesterday and he will see it through. Jim Cavanagh's delegates can probably throw this contest to anybody but Cavanagh.

"The free-for-all for attorney-general is where more candidates have appeared. There were seven last night and there are nine today. Darkhorse booms are on for District Attorney Bill Crossley, of Fall River, and City Councillor Bob Wilson, Jr., of Dorchester. Wilson's friends are out to beat Hankus Pankus Parkman. The Innes crowd is backing Barnes, at least on the first ballot. Ed Dewing claims 244 votes on the first call but is too optimistic. Judge Felix Forte has more strength than many realize.

"The contests for lieutenant-governor, treasurer, attorney general and auditor will depend a lot upon the outcome of the fight for governor. If Saltonstall takes that, anybody with anything that sounds like Obrien will have a good chance for a lesser endorsement.

Small Appeal

"The Republican appeal to disgusted Democrats will be very small indeed if the party comes up with a ticket that reads like the members of a yacht party at the Harvard-Yale boat race. This was a very serious matter under discussion in the back rooms last night where it was stated by more than one that any ticket combining such names as Saltonstall, Parkman and Weeks will run for Sweeney."

There is a slight pause at this point while The Senator applies the second horse liniment gasper to the Charlie Horse in his stomach.

"Senator, "says Timmie, "you do not show us what you have in the little bundle."

"Timmy," says The Senator, "what I have in the little bundle is a handsome gold medal that I am presenting to the convention's most outstanding figure. The inscription that is on this medal is as follows: 'Presented at the 1936 Republican State Convention to Henry Martens, of Springfield, who, by a courageous example at the very opening of hostilities, earned the undying gratitude and admiration of the delegates and the press, especially the press.'"

"Senator," says Timmy, "I do not even see this guy's name in the lineup this morning. What did he do?"

"Timmy," says The Senator, "what he did was make a welcoming speech to the delegates in exactly five sentences, totaling 165 words. This was such a tremendous shock to all concerned that the delegates were just settling down on the back of their necks when he was all through and had left the hall.

"And now, Timmy, I must away to the convention hall."

"Senator," says Timmy, "I do not know how you stand it going without sleep all night like you do."

"Timmy," says The Senator, "the secret is that I sleep through the nominating speeches."

"Senator," says Timmy, "I will see you at the hall in a short time."

"Timmy," says The Senator, donning his skimmer, "get there as early as you can to get down front, because the acoustics in the back of the hall are very bad."

"Senator," says Timmy, "I will bring my own."

3 Sky Gazers Find New Star

Astronomers had a new star to gaze upon in the heavens today.

Dr. Harlow Shapley, director of the Harvard Observatory, announced three astronomers from widely separated countries reported the discovery of the new object, visible to the naked eye, last night.

Dr. Shapley said the star, a third magnitude Nova, two degrees southwest of Delta Cephei, was found in the "Milky Way" in the constellation of Cepheus.

Lake Steamer Wins Race to Save 1400

Detroit, June 19 (INS)—A major lake tragedy, which might have claimed a staggering toll of lives, was averted today when the excursion steamer Tashmoo, with 1400 pleasure seekers aboard, made a dramatic two-mile race to a dock at Amhersburg, Ont., after a gaping hole was torn in its hull when it hit a rock off Sugar Island in Lake Erie.

TODAY'S Boon-Doggle

Whenever the Works Progress Administration is reluctant to describe in too much detail the nature of a project approved by the President, it customarily dodges this responsibility by announcing merely the approval of a "community service program."

Thus only those insatiably curious persons who will take the time and trouble to seek further information at Works Progress Administration headquarters ever discover the exact purposes for which the funds allotted are to be spent.

Some insight into the trepidation which must have prevailed in the Works Progress Administration offices when the Colorado works program was being drafted can be gleaned from the fact that of $8,000,000 worth of projects approved for Denver more than $1,000,000 worth were presented to the public under the convenient mask of the community service program, and these projects alone would have been sufficient to provide an annual income of $1000 to every case on the federal relief rolls in that city last December.

KNOX WON NRA FIGHT

BEAT JOHNSON AT OWN GAME

This is the sixth of a series of exclusive articles telling for the first time the story behind the story of the New England career of Colonel Frank Knox, Republican nominee for the vice-presidency. The series will continue in tomorrow's Boston Evening American.

By FRED PERKINS

Manchester, N. H., June 19 — General Hugh S. Johnson — then the blazingly enthusiastic executive head of the not yet ham-strung NRA — fixed Editor - Publisher Frank Knox with a belligerent eye.

"You're doing a lot of kicking about the NRA," the general stormed. "Well, what the hell's the matter with it?"

The Johnson voice rattled the windows. Girl stenographers, in offices all up and down the long corridor, cocked delighted ears.

Nor were they disappointed.

If this was to be a yelling match, former Rough Rider Knox, veteran cavalryman, cannoneer and muleskinner, had a pair of lungs—and a vocabulary—of his own.

He wasted no more time than had General Johnson on salutations and preliminaries.

"I'll tell you what's the matter with the NRA," he roared in the tone he'd use to order a battery into action. "It covers too much ground. That's the first thing that's the matter with it!"

View Given

Knox then went on to describe in emphatic detail his other objections to Blue Eagle aims and activities.

General Johnson, no man to take criticism meekly, did his capable best to make heard his side of the argument.

All in all, it was a session of verbal fireworks such as could only be set off by the clashing of two masterful temperaments and two extraordinarily well-equipped arsenals of rhetoric and expletive.

At the end of the discussion - if you could characterize the encounter by so mild a term—the general and the colonel had taken each other's measure, had found a sufficiency of common ground upon which their minds could meet and had, to their own surprise, found they liked each other personally.

In parting, they shook hands most cordially.

"This is off the record," grinned General Johnson finally, "but, in certain of your criticisms, colonel, I don't mind admitting that you're — uh — right!"

Gift o' Gab

To the present day, General Johnson credits former Rough Rider Knox with a gift of gab even equalling his own in force if not in expletive.

That's a Knox accomplishment of which few except the close friends of the Republican vice-presidential candidate are aware, for the Chicago and New Hampshire editor and publisher is deceptively mild in ordinary social and business contacts.

"He's never been a fellow you could out-shout, though," recalls Neal Dekker, Knox's friend and associate for 35 years.

"Back in the old days, in Sault Ste. Marie, he used to get all our newsboys together, a couple of times a week, and give 'em lessons in yelling.

"He was never satisfied until they could make noise enough, each on his own street corner, to drown out the shouting of the boys peddling the opposition paper.

"When the island of Martinique was devastated by an eruption of Mt. Pelee, Knox devoted special attention to perfecting every single newsboy in screaming 'All about the volcano! Thousands dead! Read about the eruption!'

"Not a boy got his papers until he was letter perfect in the lesson.

"Next big news story coming several weeks later was the grave illness of King Edward VII of England.

"That time, Knox had no opportunity to coach the newsboy crew.

"When he went on the street and heard them yelling, he almost dropped in his tracks.

"'All about the volcano,' they were howling. 'British king is near death.' Read about the eruption!"

"One of the most influential of the old guard politicians in Michigan was a good friend of Knox and of our paper, while we were still in Sault Ste. Marie.

"This political big shot was a dignified and elderly man, but he had an enormous booming voice trained by a lifetime of platform oratory.

"Visiting Knox's office one day, he was irritated by a racket some of the newsboys were making in the circulation department, next door. He started roaring at 'em to keep quiet.

"That was too much for Knox. He intended to administer all the discipline that was administered around our plant.

"The first thing I knew, out in the business office, the portly, white-haired old pol was backing in consternation toward the street, with Knox thundering at him, every foot of the way.

"No hard feelings ever developed from the incident. But Knox told me afterward 'That was a silly thing to do. I couldn't help it, though, when the old boy started getting noisy. I thought I'd show him I had lungs of my own.'"

His experiences as a Rough Rider with Teddy Roosevelt's famous regiment and his early years of give-and-take newspaper editing in wide open Sault Ste. Marie may have given Vice-Presidential Nominee Knox a good foundation for his effective and emphatic vocabulary.

But the finishing touches were put on his rhetorical sharp-shooting by his service in France as commanding officer of an ammunition train.

Knox's job in the world war was one which couldn't be done without a lot of forceful language.

There's a story in how he did it — and in how he managed to get overseas, in uniform, in the first place!

That story, however, will have to be told later.

This intimate story of the New Hampshire and New England career of Colonel Frank Knox, Republican vice-presidential nominee, will be concluded in tomorrow's Boston Evening American.

G. O. P. BIG 3 MAP DRIVE

GOVERNOR LANDON JOHN HAMILTON COLONEL KNOX

With victory in November as the shining goal of their hopes, the Republican party, "Big Three," Governor Alfred M. Landon of Kansas, nominee for President; Colonel Frank Knox, his running mate, and John Hamilton, G. O. P. national chairman, meet at Topeka to discuss strategy in campaign.

The Life of Landon

Father Opposed Public Career

Editors note: Following is the concluding article of Governor Alfred M. Landon, Republican nominee for president, written by a newspaperman who has been "covering" him for the last six months.

By ROBERT HUMPHREYS

International News Service Staff Correspondent

Topeka, Kans., June 19—One of the proudest men in America today is an old gentleman named John Landon.

Approaching 80, erect, alert, with the weather visage of a true pioneer, he is the father of Governor Alfred M. Landon of Kansas, the Republican presidential nominee.

Curiously enough, John Landon never held forth to his son that age-old American inspiration extended to all youths by their parents—"Son, who knows, some day you might be President of the United States."

"My father's chief concern always that I be a useful citizen," Governor Landon recently related. "If he ever even hinted that I seek an office, I don't recall it. In fact, when I ran for Governor of Kansas, it was against his wishes."

Father's Pride

John Landon's pride in his son is apparent as soon as you approach him on the subject, but he talks with marked modesty.

"You know," he says, "Alf's pretty dependable.

"You can put your finger on him. You can be pretty sure where he'll be, what he'll do, and how he stands.

"Sometimes I think that's why Alf was elected Governor of Kansas. Folks figured they'd know where to find him."

Old John Landon lives with the governor and his family in the executive mansion. Anne Moseman Landon, the governor's mother, died in 1914.

"Alf's had his ups and downs and troubles like everyone else," the old man relates. "He had a pretty tough break when his first wife died in 1918, leaving him and little Peggy Anne to get on by themselves."

Alfred Landon married Margaret Fleming Landon in 1913, after a courtship that dated back to youthful days when both spent summers at Lake Chautauqua, N. Y., with their families.

Their first child, Alfred M. Landon, Jr., died in infancy. Margaret Fleming Landon died a year after the birth of Peggy Anne, now a student at Kansas University.

"Alf doesn't like to talk much about those days," the governor's father says. "A few weeks after his wife died, he joined up and went to war.

"He and I looked after Peggy Anne, but we had a wonderful nurse for her. The nurse's name was Theresa Cahill. We called her 'Nanny.'

"Nanny never could get over the way Alf loved that child. Many a time I've seen him come in from the oil fields at five o'clock in the morning, sleepless and looking worn and tired.

"Then I would discover that he had ridden a train all night just to have breakfast with Peggy Anne.

"Breakfast done, he would talk with her until time for school, then he would get right back on the train for Oklahoma. Imagine —five or six hours on the train each way and no sleep just to have breakfast with his daughter!

"You know, my wife and I had two children, Alf, and a girl one year younger than he. Her name was Helen. Well, she died with diphtheria when she was 7, and I thought her brother's heart would break. He was awfully careful about Peggy Anne."

John Landon enjoys life in the furnished, brick house which is Kansas' executive mansion and the Governor's home. It's a happy household—the Governor, his father, Mrs. Landon, Peggy Anne and the two little children, Nancy Jo and John Cobb. They lead simple lives.

Neighbors drop in to call, the Landons lean over the fence to chat. The children play in the porch swing or romp on the broad expanse of the lawn. Mrs. Landon, a native of Topeka, takes an active part in club life and charities in the State capital.

The whole atmosphere is as typically informal as the listing under the L's in the Topeka phone books which reads:

Landon, Alf M., gov. r 801 Buchanan.

"Alf's never been much on fuss or formality," John Landon says. "I still think he's happiest when he's in laced boots and corduroys working in the oil fields.

Big Oil Fights

"And speaking of oil, it's downright funny to hear these politicians claim the big oil companies are supporting Alf. Why say—anybody who knows straight up about the old business knows Standard and those big companies haven't got much use for Alf. He's fought 'em for years.

"Go down into the shallow fields in Kansas and Oklahoma —the 'poor man' fields, they call them around here—and ask those little fellows, the independents, which side Alf's on. Why, the 'independents,' of course—he's one of 'em, himself."

Does John Landon still watch politics?

"Sure I do. I kept up with Alf's progress before the convention. It runs in our blood. I was always pretty active in politics, but I never ran for any office. I used to work hard for old Teddy Roosevelt back in the Bull Moose days, and so did Alf."

How does he size up his son as an aspirant for the White House?

This man, whose life spans pre-Civil War days, rubs his forehead and meditates as if he were weighing them all since Abraham Lincoln.

His answer comes. It is eight words long. He says with deep conviction:

"Alf would make a good President. He's fit."

Inquiry Slated On Curley Crash

Frank A. Goodwin, state registrar of motor vehicles, prepared today to launch a routine investigation into the automobile accident in which Paul Curley, 22-year-old son of Governor Curley, was injured.

Curley suffered a cut over his left eye and the sedan registered to his sister, Mrs. Mary Curley Donnelly, was badly damaged in a collision with another car and an Elevated railway support on Tremont street and Davenport street, Roxbury.

LANDON WARNS U. S. AGAINST RED FORCES

Topeka, Kan, June 19 (U8)—Solemnly warning that "forces alien to our American form of government seek to destroy our country," Governor Alfred M. Landon, Republican presidential nominee, declared America faces the "greatest crisis since the Civil War."

His statement came in a telegram to Mrs. Eleanor Gridley of Chicago, noted teacher and writer, celebrating her 90th birthday anniversary.

The nation is indebted to the men and women teachers who are "unselfishly striving to keep alive the spirit of real Americanism among our children," Landon said, adding:

"That tradition has been immortalized in the Spirit of '76, the painting for which your ancestry was the inspiration in the early days of the nation."

MRS. GRIDLEY REPLIES

In reply, Mrs. Gridley thanked the Governor for his message, saying:

"Americans everywhere without regard to party are rejoicing that you have been selected to lead our great nation into days of honest performance, true progress, and genuine happiness.

"I trust that you will invoke the divine spirit and guidance that actuated our beloved Abraham Lincoln. God bless you."

With announcement by Landon he would leave Topeka next Wednesday night for a vacation on a ranch near Estes Park, Col., returning to Topeka July 6, came reports Colorado is planning an enthusiastic reception for him.

DENVER PLANS WELCOME

Despite notice from the governor he would make no speeches in Colorado, at least during his vacation, telephone reports to the Landon leaders here were that Denver and other cities were preparing to give him a roaring reception.

While turning his eyes toward the Colorado vacation grounds, Landon also began setting in motion plans for a special session of the Kansas Legislature to initiate an amendment to the state's constitution, enabling the state instead of counties to administer social security or old-age annuity measures and co-operate as a state with the federal government in such undertakings.

CALLS LEGISLATURE

A call was issued by the governor for the Legislature to convene July 7.

Kansas already has begun, in cooperation with the federal government, aids for public health, maternal and child health, to crippled children and child welfare generally.

But some features of the social security program have had to be held in abeyance, pending adoption of a constitutional amendment.

Landon pointed out that the amendment would be worded broadly, so that the state would not be limited to any specific form of annuities or social service.

Lynn Youth Wins $100 In Braley Song Contest

Tries Out Ballad

The music composition of a 17-year-old Lynn High School graduate today was selected as the prize-winning "Just You" ballad in the Berton Braley Ballad Competition, sponsored by the Boston Evening American and Boston Sunday Advertiser.

The tune submitted by Joseph Baisuck of 30 Harwood street, Lynn, for the lyric of "Just You," written by Berton Braley, was adjudged the winner of the $100 cash prize offered by those newspapers.

The Lynn youth's script will be entered in the national contest to be held in New York next month, where additional cash prizes will be awarded the compositions selected.

Following three weeks of intensive work in the selection of the prize ballad, the three judges finally agreed upon Baisuck's entry.

Although no cash prize is being given for the runner-up and third place winners, the Berton Braley editor wishes to congratulate those persons.

RUNNER-UP, THIRD PLACE

Jack Heslin of 77 Clay street, Dorchester, was picked as second place winner, and the composition of Walter Roiffe of 11 Durham street, Boston, was selected as third best.

Two Somerville residents submitted selections to which the judges gave honorable mention, namely, M. P. Washburn of 55a Webster street and Charles J. Morse of 51 Bailey road.

Baisuck, who graduated from Lynn Classical high school last week with high honors, plans to enter the New England Conservatory of Music next fall.

On being notified of his good fortune in the ballad contest young Baisuck said:

"I thought I would take a chance at the ballad contest. The tune which I submitted and which won the prize was a composition I have been working on for several months. It was an unusual tune.

"When I read about the ballad contest and read the lyric it suited with my tune. I immediately sat down at the piano and in less than one hour I completed the composition."

Joseph Baisuck, Lynn high school graduate, plays his winning Berton Braley ballad, "Just You," as Janet Carroll, songbird at the Mayfair, tries out the lyrics.
(Picture from International News Photograph Service)

The young author has been studying music for the past eight years. He intends to make music writing and orchestration work his vocation.

Young Baisuck, is not the only member of his family that is musically inclined. His mother is a pianist, and the Russian ancestry of the ballad winner is dotted with musicians.

At present the youthful composer is teaching his little sister how to play the piano. Although she has received only a few lessons from her "big brother," she is well advanced in the art of "tickling the ivories."

At a later date the winning "Just You" ballad will be played over the air by the Club Mayfair orchestra under the direction of George Harris.

Only five more days remain for those who wish to enter the "Boondoggle Ballad" contest. This will close midnight June 23. A prize of $100 will be awarded the winner.

All communications and entries should be addressed to the Berton Braley Ballad Editor, Boston Evening American, 5 Winthrop Square, Boston, Mass.

BALLAD RULES

The Boston American is inviting amateur and professional song composers to write the music for two ballads by Berton Braley.

The writing of this music is a genuine test of skill in musical composition and involves no elements of a game of chance or a lottery. Anyone may compete, whether or not he or she is a regular reader of the Boston American.

A cash prize of $100 will be awarded to the amateur or professional composer who submits what is considered the most appropriate melody for each of the two ballads. The judging will be done by a board of musical experts selected by the Boston American.

The date of the closing of entries for the first ballad—"Just You"—was midnight May 23, and of entries for the second—"A Boondoggle Ballad"—is midnight, June 23.

A similar regional contest is being conducted in fifteen other cities by the Hearst newspapers.

After regional prizes have been awarded in each of the cities where the competition is held, the music of each regional winner will be sent to New York City to be judged by a national board of distinguished composers, who will award two national prizes of $100 each for the ballads.

Musical manuscripts entered for regional or national awards will not be returned to the senders. This does not apply to manuscripts of prize winners, who will have their manuscripts returned, and will be privileged to dispose of them in any way they choose, the manuscripts being their exclusive property.

The awards of the regional and national judges selected by the Hearst newspapers will be final and not subject to appeal, this condition being accepted by each contestant prior to submitting music for either ballad.

CITY ABSOLVES DOLAN FIGURE

Request for the discharge of R. L. Emerson as a defendant in the $250,000 suit against Emerson, Edmund L. Dolan and five others, was made today in Superior Court by Robert G. Dodge, special counsel for the city.

In asking the court to drop Emerson as a defendant, Attorney Dodge declared he never should have been made a defendant in the first place.

Emerson's contract as manager of the Legal Securities Corporation, a firm alleged in the suit to have been controlled secretly by Dolan while he was city treasurer, reveals, Dodge declared, that Emerson was barred from deriving profits through bond deals with the city.

Judge Edward F. Hanify, who is hearing the suit, instructed Attorney Dodge to file a motion to Emerson and the court would entertain it.

The City of Boston special counsel assented, and then Richard D. Seamans, certified public accountant, was recalled to the stand as a witness for the city.

Mother Awaits Death as Killer

Hollidaysburg, Pa., June 19—Mrs. Margaret Karmendi, 24-year-old mother, today faced death for killing her three-year-old son.

Roy Lockard, her friend, is awaiting electrocution, having assumed full blame for the murder, but a jury convicted Mrs. Karmendi yesterday. Her attorney will appeal.

MOTHER, TWO SLAIN

Former Springfield Woman Victim

Pittsburgh, June 19—Police were baffled today by a triple mystery presented by the killing of two children and their mother, Mrs. Eleanor Feely, 30, a former Springfield, Mass., girl and graduate of a law school there.

The former Massachusetts girl was the wife of a University of Pittsburgh professor.

The bodies of the children, who had been stabbed and strangled, were found in their bedrooms in their home in the fashionable Brushton district, and the body of their mother was in another room.

Mrs. Feely had been stabbed near the heart with an icepick. Around her neck was a rope which was also looped around a radiator pipe. A claw-hammer had been used as a tourniquet to make the rope tight.

The print of a man's thumb was found on the hammer.

HELD TRIPLE MURDER

Police Lieut. George Schmotzer spoke of the possibility of murder and suicide, but Deputy Coroner John Aris declared it was a triple murder. The authorities were in dispute on whether a window screen could have been opened from the outside to admit an intruder.

"I don't care what the police say, some fiend murdered these three," said Aris.

Besides the ice pick and the rope-and-hammer garrote, police found a butcher knife, which was beside the mother's body.

Mayor William McNair, who went to the scene, said he had learned that a telegraph messenger inquired for the Feely's Wednesday night. The mayor believes the message may be of significance if it can be found.

A letter from Prof. Martin Feely, who has been at a summer camp at Pottersville, N. J., was found in the house. It addressed his wife in loving terms. The Feelys were an unusually happy family, according to friends.

Mrs. Feely came here from Springfield, Mass., six years ago, to marry Prof. Feely, who is in the physical education department of the university.

Death in all three cases was officially pronounced as due to strangulation.

Robert, 6, was strangled with a cord from a child's bathrobe. Janice, 3, was strangled with a rope. Under the little girl's body was a small red-handled screwdriver.

Both children had stab wounds on the left temples and Bobby had also been struck with a hammer.

TELLS OF WEEPING

According to Mrs. Grace Stansbury, a nurse who had attended the boy recently, the mother had appeared nervous and depressed.

The bodies were discovered by Charles Young, 48, owner of the house, who lives with his wife, 17-year-old son and his father-in-law on the upper floors. Young said he was unable to sleep because of the strange quiet on the first floor and so investigated.

6 Children Saved In Saugus Blaze

Fire wiped out the home of Mr. and Mrs. Linwood Roberts in Bow street, North Saugus, today just after the frantic parents had carried their brood of six small children to safety.

The rescued children included Richard, nine, Donald, seven, William, five, Albert, four, Walter, two, and Dorothy, 17 months.

DON'T TREAT CONSTIPATION* LIGHTLY

Poor Health May Be the Price of Neglect

Too many people dismiss common constipation" as a matter of no great consequence. Yet this condition causes discomfort, and may lead to headaches and loss of appetite. When it is allowed to continue, it may lower your resistance, and so increase your chances of catching a serious illness.

Common constipation often develops when you eat meals that lack sufficient "bulk." Your system fails to get needed internal exercise. Fortunately, today, you have a generous source of effective "bulk" in Kellogg's ALL-BRAN.

Within the body, the "bulk" in ALL-BRAN absorbs moisture, and forms a soft mass, which gently cleanses the system. This natural laxative food also supplies vitamin B and contains iron.

Serve ALL-BRAN as a cereal, with milk or cream, or cook into muffins, breads, etc. Two tablespoonfuls daily are usually sufficient. Stubborn cases may require ALL-BRAN oftener. If not relieved this way, consult your doctor.

ALL-BRAN is guaranteed by the Kellogg Company as an effective laxative food for constipation.* Sold by all grocers. Made by Kellogg in Battle Creek.

RACKET-DEATH PROBE HEADED BY DECELLES

Springfield, June 19—Investigation into the alleged insurance fraud racket brought to light as a result of the mystery deaths of three men and a woman during the past year, may extend across the entire state.

Insurance Commissioner Francis J. DeCelles communicated with District Attorney Moriarty today and requested him to forward to the State House reports of the probe.

The insurance commissioner has also requested at least five leading insurance company officials to appear at this office next week so he might be able to obtain first hand information as to the various phases of the alleged racket.

In a surprise move, today, District Attorney Moriarty ordered state detectives to hurry to Ludlow to check a new lead in connection with the mystery death of Frank Halgas.

HALGAS CASE PRESSED

The officers were requested to interview again Stanley Halgas, son of he man, and his wife, Mrs. Frank Halgas.

Concentration on the Halgas case was ordered a few hours after District Attorney Moriarty had conferred for several hours with two high insurance officials, which he described was general discussion of the activities of several persons whose names have been brought to the attention of officials of the probe.

Police were particularly anxious to learn rom Mrs. Halgas whether her husband had ever discussed insurance policies with her and whether he had ever expressed fear for his life during the three months preceding his death.

WIDOW NEAR COLLAPSE

Mrs. Halgas was not present when the body of her husband was exhumed and later reinterred. She has been on the verge of collapse since her husband was struck down by an automobile and so badly injured he lived only three hours.

The interest of Insurance Commissioner DeCelles in the probe grew when reports reached him that there was evidence of the operation of the system in Worcester, Fall River, New Bedford, Lowell and Lawrence.

MYSTERY DEATH VICTIM

Investigators of alleged insurance frauds continued today their investigation of circumstances surrounding the death of Frank Halgas of Springfield.

Auto Hits Girl, 8; Condition Serious

The Children's Hospital reported today that the condition of eight-year-old Doris King, struck down by an automobile and suffering a fractured skull, is very serious.

The little girl was hit near her home in Davis avenue, Brookline. The car was operated by John Koch of Graham avenue, Brookline, police said.

LINDY HEART BLOOD

New 'Soup' Keeps Device Alive

New York, June 10 (INS)—Two new "chemical soups," which supply an artificial blood-stream for the mechanical "heart and lungs," devised by Col. Charles A. Lindbergh, have been developed at the Rockefeller Institute for medical research here, it was revealed today.

These synthetic media are keeping entire organs—removed from the bodies of animals—alive and growing successfully in the all-glass apparatus, it was announced by Dr. Lillian E. Baker, of the Institute.

"For the present, they are the most efficient artificial media as yet devised for the cultivation of tissues and entire organs," she reported in Science, official organ of the American Association for the Advancement of Science.

Ingredients used, in addition to those in former "less complete" media, are vitamins A, B-1, C and D, according to Dr. Baker's "recipes."

Today Dr. Baker revealed, for the first time, that thyroid glands taken from adult cats doubled their weight in the apparatus in three or four days, and other glands tripled their weight in five days, when supplied with one of the new "chemical soups."

PACKER SUES U. S. ON TAXES

Chicago, June 19 (AP)—The Cudahy Packing Company filed suit today in Federal Court to recover $11,908,983.83 paid to the government in processing taxes under the invalidated Agricultural Adjustment Administration.

The suit was the first of its kind to be filed by any packer here.

Taxing Workers' Pay

Man Is Laid Off! What Happens?

Editor's note: This is the fifth of a series of articles analyzing the provisions of the Social Security Act and showing what it will eventually do to the workers' pay.

By R. P. ELLIS
Industrial Economist

What may prove of even more interest to employes, whose pay is to be taxed, is the matter of unemployment "insurance."

Here again no insurance principles enter into the provisions of the Social Security Act.

The only thing that you are ASSURED of is the tax—not the benefit!

Who are taxed? Payrolls of industrial and commercial employers having eight or more employes for 20 or more days in the year. But payrolls covering government (State or Federal) employes, agricultural or domestic labor, sailormen and a few others ARE NOT TAXED.

This tax effects about half of those "gainfully employed" and, what is worse, the half containing many with the lowest net incomes in the United States. The payroll of a $20 to $25 clerk in business is taxed, but not that of a government clerk earning $25 to $40 or more each week. The pay of the truck driver is reached by this tax, but not the pay of the private chauffeur.

If Jobs Are Lost

Let us suppose these four workers lose their jobs. What is to happen, according to the Social Security set-up?

The business clerk and the truck driver are to wait around for a number of weeks and then are to be given unemployment insurance (which is to be HALF of their former earnings) for 10 to 15 weeks.

The government clerk and the private chauffeur are to have government "made-work" given them —or go on relief.

What is to happen to the money raised by payroll taxation and accumulated in a fund, ostensibly for unemployment insurance?

During the explanations of the purposes of the Social Security program, which Secretary of Labor Perkins, spokesman for the Roosevelt administration, gave before the Senate finance committee, the question came up of "earmarking" (that is setting aside) the payroll taxes that are to be collected for unemployment insurance.

Senate Hearing

I quote from the record, pages 126 and 127:

SENATOR BARKLEY: "I think it is fair to assume that there would be a surplus in the Federal Treasury out of that fund (tax on payrolls)."

SECRETARY PERKINS: "Which would probably be used for federal relief, if that were the case."

SENATOR BARKLEY: "... It seems to me that there is serious objection to the collection of a tax for a definite purpose, like unemployment insurance, and then use a considerable portion of that tax for general government's expense."

To which the following astounding reply was made:

SECRETARY PERKINS: "This tax is not collected for unemployment insurance. This is a general tax. It is assumed that the federal government has ample use for taxes and is always seeking new sources of revenue."

SENATOR BARKLEY: "I think the fund ought not to be dissipated for general purposes; it ought to be kept intact for unemployment insurance."

SECRETARY PERKINS: "It might be kept intact in a fund from which the government will draw to pay, for instance, for public works."

THE CHAIRMAN: "Miss Perkins, as far as you are concerned, and so far as your committee (on Social Security) is concerned, you have no objection to making it a special fund, have you?"

SECRETARY PERKINS: "Except I would have a very great objection to making it a special fund which was ever to be returned to the Senate for paying unemployment insurance benefit."

Some States Refuse

The unemployment insurance portion of Federal payroll tax reaches its maximum, 3 percent, in 1938. This money is not to be paid out by Uncle Sam for unemployment to those who lose their jobs in the taxed occupations. It goes into the U. S. Treasury.

However, if and when any state passes an "unemployment compensation" law that fulfills certain requirements, then and then only can the state get back some of the money—but not to exceed 90 per cent — collected from its citizens ostensibly for unemployment insurance.

Any state refusing to pass the exact kind of law demanded will receive no refunds—for THE FEDERAL PAYROLL TAX WILL BE LEVIED JUST THE SAME—and its citizens will receive no unemployment benefits out of the taxes they have paid.

SOME STATES HAVE REFUSED TO PASS SUCH LAWS.

Further, I question how much could be done with 3 per cent of payrolls towards providing unemployment compensation for even those thrown out of work in the taxed occupations.

The following table, prepared by the President's own committee on economic security, speaks volumes:

Year	Percent of Unemployment	Year	Percent of Unemployment
1927	13.1	1928	8.5
1925	7.5	1929	8.1
1924	9.0	1930	15.3
1923	7.8	1931	26.0
1920	7.1	1932	39.9

(Tomorrow R. P. Ellis discusses Pensions for the Present Old Aged).

3 PLEAD POLICE STRIKER JOB

Hasty retreat down six flights of stairs at police headquarters failed today to save from recognition three emissaries who, for more than an hour, pleaded with Police Commissioner McSweeney the cause of the police strikers.

The commissioner's callers were Philip Corbett, John Counihan and James Norton, all member of the Boston Social Club.

The club includes striking policemen of 1919 and their families.

Commissioner McSweeney, however, made no secret of the conference or of the matters discussed.

"We talked about possible additions to the personnel of the department," he said.

"I showed them a letter from Mayor Mansfield and called their attention to his assertion that no funds are available for enlargement of the police force."

Boston Net Debt Put at 135 Million

Statistics made public by the National Municipal Review show Boston stands 12th in a list of 13 of the nation's largest cities in the matter of per capita bonded indebtedness.

The city's net debt is $135,000,000 of which $63,000,000 is self-supporting, the statistics show.

CHARLESTOWN FIRE KILLS 2 CHILDREN, HERO FATHER

to go into the burning building himself.

"It is a disgraceful situation. The most important duty of any municipal government is to protect the lives and safety of its citizens.

"Other municipal services can be neglected if necessary without constituting a hazard to the lives of the citizens, but the fire department must be kept at full strength.

"There will be other disasters like this in Charlestown and in other districts, taking just as shocking a toll of lives, unless something is done."

Councillor Mellen pointed out that the scene of the triple-fatality fire early today is only two minutes from the nearest fire station, and three minutes from Charlestown police station—yet three persons perished from the flames, two of them dying in the building, beneath a window which found no ladder raised in time.

The fire which took the lives of Chandler, a Navy Yard machinist, and two of his three children, who under investigation today by the state fire marshal's office.

More than 200 terrified residents of the district, where most of the dwellings are old, three-story frame tenements built close to each other, fled their homes in fear that the flames would spread.

Screams of the frightened children carried to the street, added to the din and confusion.

Chandler gave his own life in a vain attempt to save little Ethel, after he had carried Roger and Phyllis six, to the street through the fire.

The father had made his way safely to the street, believing that all his children were safe. Finding one unaccounted for, he dashed back to get her, and firemen came across the two bodies later, badly burned.

The flames spread so rapidly and so hot that 100 sailors and 50 marines from the Navy Yard, ready to aid firemen, stood by unable to raise a hand though eager to attempt rescue.

That the death list is not greater is due, observers said, to the bravery of firemen who dared soaring flames to pick six injured from their beds and pass them out through windows to laddermen.

A fireman was hurt by falling debris.

At Haymarket Relief Station are: Bruce Kelley, 55, and his son, Harold, 26, who leaped from a window, burns to the head and body.

Phyllis Chandler, 6, daughter of Chandler, overcome by smoke.

Edward Gnaro, 26, member of the crew of the naval tug Iwasca, whose hands were burned when he tried to enter the house.

Phillip Tague, Charlestown district fire chief, lacerations to the right leg.

The fire was discovered by Patrolman Alfred E. Pearson making the round of his beat.

By the time the firemen arrived, they had to brave a wall of flames inside and outside the structure to start their hunt for victims and to throw up their ladders for rescues.

Chandler and his daughter, Ethel, were found together and were rushed to the Haymarket station in two police ambulances, but physicians said they were dead before they arrived.

Roger Chandler died at the hospital.

Tague was injured by falling debris as he searched the house for others he thought trapped.

Harold Kelley jumped 20 feet dren, awakened from sleep and from a second-story window but broke no bones. He is being treated for burns.

Woodrow Kelley, who lives on the second floor, was assisted from his apartment and treated on the scene

BANSHEES HEAR G-MAN HOOVER

New York, June 19 (US)—J. Edgar Hoover, the head G-man, was guest yesterday of the Ghost men.

The Ghost men are the banshees, which means wailing ghosts of Scotland and Ireland. There was quite a bit of wailing at the meeting of the banshees, but by mutual agreement the wails are off the record and reporters see nothing, hear nothing and write nothing. But Mr. Hoover made a speech!

Among the Banshees, an organization of members of the lively arts, who helped with yesterday's wailing were Arthur "Bugs" Baer, an A-1 waller; William Randolph Hearst Jr., J. V. Connolly, McLelland Barclay, Barry Faris, Seymour Berkson, Rube Goldberg, Milt Gross, Clem McCarthy, Prof. Moley, John A. Malley, managing editor of the Boston American and Boston Sunday Advertiser, John B. Kennedy and Clyde Tolson, assistant to Mr. Hoover.

ROARING WIDE OPEN! Fred Jacoby, Jr., outboard motor-boat champion, takes a terrific pounding as vibration hammers at his nerves and digestion. "Good digestion is all-important in this game," Fred says. "Camels make food taste better and help me get the good out of what I eat."

A CASHIER HAS TO BE fast—accurate—pleasant. Miss Travis Lander, shown at the ticket window of a New York movie, says: "I like to smoke at mealtime. Camels help my digestion—cheer me up. So many of the girls are taking up Camels. They have a marvelous taste!"

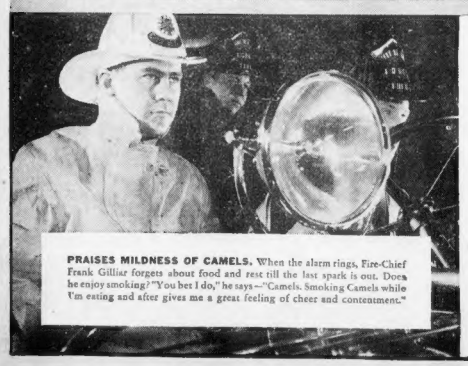
The Presidential Room of the Mayflower Hotel
Washington, D. C.

Famous men . . . beautifully gowned women . . . diplomats and statesmen . . . gather here, while the Mayflower kitchens give forth a stream of rare and tempting dishes. And from table after table the fragrant smoke of Camels rises. The famous maitre d'hôtel of the Mayflower—greeted as "Fred" by thousands of the world's epicures—says: "Of course, our cosmopolitan clientele prefer Camels. They are a great favorite with our guests."

A SUGGESTION

At mealtime, try Camels yourself and see why smokers say

"For Digestion's sake—smoke Camels"



PRAISES MILDNESS OF CAMELS. When the alarm rings, Fire-Chief Frank Gilliar forgets about food and rest till the last spark is out. Does he enjoy smoking? "You bet I do," he says—"Camels. Smoking Camels while I'm eating and after gives me a great feeling of cheer and contentment."

THE BEST-DRESSED GOLFER. In addition to winning a long string of victories in golf tournaments, Johnny Farrell was voted the best-dressed golfer at the National Open Championship matches for a number of years. Johnny carries his Camels through the tournaments. He says: "I've been smoking Camels for years, just like most of the other fellows in the tournaments. A Camel puts me on the top of the world. Smoking Camels is a great aid to my digestion."

Science confirms the truth of the popular phrase "For Digestion's Sake... Smoke Camels"

Scientists have found that Camels promote well-being by stimulating the flow of the digestive fluids...alkaline digestive fluids...necessary for good digestion. Often fatigue, worry, excitement, nervousness—all interfere with this digestive flow. Camels restore and increase it, thus assisting digestion to proceed normally and healthfully. Discriminating smokers everywhere commend Camels for the comfort and good cheer they find in smoking Camels for digestion's sake.

With their finer, costlier tobaccos, Camels give mildness a new meaning. They do not get on your nerves or rasp your throat.

Make Camels your smoke—for their cheery "lift"...for their aid to digestion. Camels set you right. And Camels are firmly packed! No loose ends, no shredding.

Wayland Theatrical Group Presents Play in Haywood Estate Theater

By BETTY ALDEN

THE WORLD OF THE theater is steeped in little human interest stories and sentimental anecdotes about the great stars and green room receptions of bygone days . . .

Yet there is, perhaps, no more quaint and interesting remnant of the "great days" of the legitimate stage than the miniature theater on the estate of Mrs. Sidney Haywood (Beatrice Herford) in Wayland . . .

OLIVIA STONE

Built in 1904, the tiny theater, which seats about 120 people, is complete with stage, footlights, boxes, velvet upholstery and red and gold decorations . . .

Many theatrical "greats" of both the past and modern eras, have visited Miss Herford's theater . . . The night it opened Gelett Burgess, a comedian, acted as ticket seller in the little box office . . . and today the door of the box office bears the pencilled autographs of such celebrities as Clyde Fitch, Lotta Crabtree, William Archer, Ellen Terry, Katharine Cornell and George Arliss . . .

So it is with no little trepidation that a group of neighborhood amateur players are presenting "Minnie Breezer" this evening and tomorrow evening . . . for their acting must be of high standards in keeping with the tradition of the little playhouse, in order to satisfy the shades of the ancient thespians which lurk in the old wooden rafters to view the performance . . .

Miss Herford, well known as a monologuist and actress, has been helping to direct the energetic little group which includes Olivia Stone, Hope Hubbard, Isabel Wight, William Raymond, Charles Way, Jr., and Mrs. Gregory Cooper . . . Carl Kenney has been coaching the players.

Olivia Stone and Hope Hubbard seldom fail to qualify for a part in any amateur production they try out for . . . and have both played prominent roles in recent Junior League productions . . .

Mr. and Mrs. J. Sidney Stone of Beacon street and Wayland are sure to occupy box seats at this evening's performance, and others who will attend the play are Dr. and Mrs. Joshua Hubbard and Mrs. William Raymond, whose husband, a lecturer and writer, plays the part of Uncle Otto in the play . . .

Jean Read Weds on North Shore Today

LOOKING LIKE a miniature doll on an old fashioned wedding cake, petite and dark eyed Jean Read wears heavy bridal satin and old family lace as she is married this afternoon in St. John's Church, Beverly Farms, to Whitney Stoddard . . .

Jean, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Harold W. Read of Cambridge, is wearing the wedding gown in which her mother and both her sisters were married . . . The two sisters, Mrs. Francis Appleton Harding of Dedham and Mrs. Samuel Batchelder of Beverly Farms, are participating in today's ceremony, the former as matron of honor and Mrs. Batchelder both as bridesmaid and hostess at the small wedding reception at her home . . .

Mr. Read escorts his daughter to the altar and Rev. Bradford Burnham reads the service . . .

In addition to her sisters, the bride has Mrs. Charles Stoddard, Jr., sister-in-law of the bridegroom, as a bridesmaid, and also in this group are Mrs. Granville O. Barclay of Syosset, L. I., Molly Nesmith of Cambridge, Jane Locke of Williamstown, formerly of Brookline, Virginia Phelps and Lyde Wayne, both of Hartford . . .

They are all wearing gowns of apricot organdie trimmed with deep blue, matching horsehair hats and arm bouquets of blue delphinium . . . Mrs. Harding's outfit is of similar style in blue with peach and blue flowers . . . The bride's mother, Mrs. Read, is wearing rose beige lace, and Mrs. Charles N. Stoddard, mother of the bridegroom, has chosen a gown of powder blue lace . . .

Dinner Dance for Bridal Party

Charles Stoddard, Jr., brother of the bridegroom, of Greenfield, is serving him as best man and the ushers are Harold Read, Jr., and Robert P., of Cambridge, and a group of out of town men, including Robert Potter of Chicago, Henry Peterson of New York, Richard Berry of Hartford, Douglas Abercrombie of Greenfield, Burges Green and C. Fred Westin of New York, and Lawrence Rockwell of Long Island . . .

Last evening Mr. and Mrs. Charles Stoddard of Greenfield, parents of the bridegroom, gave a dinner dance at the Casino for the bridal couple . . . Their son, who graduated from Williams in 1935, has been doing graduate work at Harvard and is going to combine his honeymoon with studying in Europe this summer on a Carnegie Scholarship . . . He and his bride, a Vincent Club girl, are sailing tomorrow, and on their return in September will be at home at Holden Green, Cambridge . . .

Among the out-of-town guests here for the wedding are Mr. and Mrs. Richard Wayne and Mr. and Mrs. George Wells Cheney of South Manchester, Ct., Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Caldecott Chubb of Old Saybrook, Ct., and ex-Governor and Mrs. Joseph B. Ely of Westfield . . .

CHAPTER TWENTY

[illegible] "Peter," she faltered. "Peter, what's the matter?"

His mouth worked. He got up and would have strode past her out of the door, but she barred his way. "Peter! You're sick!"

He went back and sank into his chair. A [illegible] came back into his face. He smiled bitter[illegible] "A lot you care what's happened. Talking about [illegible] you said.

"Oh, Peter, that isn't true. I was mad and I did want to give you a piece of my mind, but I know how I love you. It doesn't matter what's happened. I'm sorry. What is it? Tell me. Where did you get the money? You haven't been gambling, have you? Peter, you won't make me worry. I still own the shack and you can still keep your job if you want it. ADVICE on LOVE and MARRIAGE by BEATRICE FAIRFAX

Up-to-Date Juliet Sings To Romeo Who Hides On the Balcony

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX

If I were to rewrite "Romeo and Juliet," bringing that Shakespearean masterpiece up-to-date, I'd have Romeo hiding behind the balcony screen and Juliet singing her lustiest in the garden. One couldn't modernize an Elizabethan love story and do anything else.

Every girl wants to marry, at first some particular man—a type; later, any man. Dying a spinster is the big fear in her life. The urge to have a husband, children and a home of her own is as fundamental as her desire for food and clothing.

But a man—his is a different story, entirely different. He wants to be with women. He likes their company, wouldn't be without it. Their praise flatters his vanity, nourishes his soul as water a plant. He'll do anything a girl asks—anything but marry her.

A man weakens and chances of course. If he didn't there wouldn't be any marriages children or homes. But during the first stage of courtship it is almost without exception the girl who's leading up to the "yes" and the boy who's shying away from it.

MAN IS SELFISH

The depression, unemployment present living standards, they all contribute to this masculine hesitancy, but the principal cause is, I really believe, the modern young man's unwillingness to assume responsibilities. He is selfish, too ambitious for his own good, and, not infrequently, tied to his mother's apron strings. Certainly he is NOT the man his father was.

I have no sympathy with those who deplore women's presence in business and industry, or who advocate the discharge of every girl from her job. Who I always ask, put girls behind a machine or typewriter? Surely not themselves! Men put them there, men's refusal to marry and shoulder burdens properly theirs. Men put women to work, no one can tell me differently.

Every girl I don't care who she is or how much she knows will gladly take off her office dress, put on a kitchen apron, if and just as soon as the boy she loves asks her. There never was and never will be a woman who'd exchange her baby for a typewriter.

My advice to all young men is MAKE UP YOUR MIND YOU'RE GOING TO MARRY AND THAT YOU'RE GOING TO DO IT JUST AS SOON AS POSSIBLE. STOP BEING A PLAYBOY. TRY BEING A MAN FOR A CHANGE.

Marriage isn't a ball and chain though too many men regard it as such. It is the greatest institution devised this side of Heaven. History, the whole story of the human race, proves this, and I prefer to accept it instead of the free love notions and the isms that emanate from Russia and other radical, untried sources.

A SAFE BET

Far from being a handicap to life, marriage has made millionaires out of bums, transformed ne'er-do-wells into conservative, worthwhile citizens. One can find proof on every side, if he takes the trouble to look around.

Naturally there are failures in marriage; these are to be expected because human nature at best IS frail. Also, there are poverty, heartaches and suffering in marriage, but they don't even begin to compare with the regrets, the disillusionment, the ill-fed only's of the unmarried, the withered bachelor and the old-faced old maid.

Marriage, like life itself, may be a lottery, but if it is it's the safest, surest lottery in the world. The odds are always FOR the married, against the unmarried.

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX

I'm so excited about that letter I can hardly wait for my husband to come and tell him. When it came I laughed and then cried. Stupid, perhaps, to feel so, but it seemed wonderful when I wrote to you about the need of having a friend to talk things over with. A personal letter was the last thing in the world I expected.

Thank you so very, very much for your kindness.

MRS. A.

DEAR MRS. A:

I am printing your letter of appreciation because it made me feel quite as happy as you feel. There is no reward in life so wonderful as the knowledge that you've brought happiness to a lonely brother or sister.

BEATRICE FAIRFAX

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX:

We are both 18 and very much in love. Our problem is that we are constantly fighting with each other. Every trifle causes a disagreement and, usually, a bitter quarrel. But, as soon as we are separated, we're sorry and want to make up.

Is there hope for our being happy after marriage?

TWO IN LOVE.

DEAR YOUNG FRIENDS:

They used to say, "True love never runs smoothly," but I could never agree with that particular philosophy. Girls and boys who quarrel before marriage usually continue to do so after marriage. And after years of this, husband and wife finally seek relief in the divorce courts.

My belief is that both of you are too self-centered to hope for a happy marriage with each other. Unless you have the strength of character to revamp your likes and dislikes, it would be wiser to seek other partners.

BEATRICE FAIRFAX.

FRAGILE CHARM OF LACY HAND-MADE

THERE'S NO DOUBT that of all the lovely things knitting needles can produce, just about the loveliest is the lace-stitch frock. It's cool, airy, devastating in its femininity, and in spite of its positively ethereal and float-away-at-a-puff look is strong as a farmhand's overalls (like plenty of females you and I know!). Directions for knitting this two-piece confection may be had simply by writing to Annice Brink, Fashion Editor, Boston Evening American, and inclosing a stamped, self-addressed envelope.

Magic of Summer Make-up

By ARLINE GOULD

"THE glamorous new summer make-up is, of course, flattering and terribly becoming. But isn't it slightly artificial and theatrical looking?"

This question often asked, was answered this week at the Fashion Congress assembled in the roof garden of the Ritz-Carlton Hotel.

Four of Boston's loveliest society girls modeled beach clothes before a jury of 12 socially prominent Boston women and four of their good taste and keen sense of value.

The models wore summer make-up by four of the country's leading cosmeticians. Each completely entranced the audience and group of women [illegible]

IDENTIFY BODY AS STEAMER SUICIDE

A torso washed up on a Rhode Island beach today was identified as that of Leslie T. Barnes, 32, a novice in the Cowley Fathers, at Cambridge, who vanished from a New York to Boston steamer eight months ago.

FOUND ON BEACH

The torso showed clean cuts where the limbs were severed and this gave rise at first to a murder theory.

But with identification of the torso as that of Barnes, who had left a note in his stateroom asking forgiveness, authorities said the body could have been dismembered by a propeller and the cuts worn smooth by the water.

The torso was found on Quonochontaug beach at Charlestown, R. I. Identification was made by 13 cards found in a water-soaked bill fold in a pocket of the costume.

The cards bore the name: "Mr Leslie Crawford-Barnes."

SON OF PASTOR

Barnes was the son of the Rev. W. Ham J. Barnes, pastor of the First Baptist Church, East n Pa.

He was on his way to Boston after a vacation at [illegible] to resume studies at St. Fra[illegible] House, Cambridge.

Neither his father nor h[illegible] ciates could explain his disappearance. He was a graduate of Lafayette College and had worked on newspapers in Boston, New Bedford and Easton.

Rush Delays Bonus Cash

World War veterans in Greater Boston today had close to $15,000,000 cash in their pockets, while workers at the central post office were trying to dig themselves out from under an avalanche of bonus bonds turned in for negotiable checks.

The rain of certified bonds has been so heavy, officials said, that it is likely that most veterans, not now possessing their cash, will have to wait three days from the day they send in their bonds.

Meanwhile, with the close of several certification units in outlying sections of the district, workers at the central post office in Devonshire street prepared to take care of late comers.

About half of the 186,000 checks destined for New England veterans had been sent out today. Final payment will total $100,000,000.

Class Program

A program of music, dancing and dramatic sketches was the feature of the annual class day of the Class of 1936 of the New England Conservatory of Music in Jordan Hall.

Father of Sunday Baseball' Is Dead

Former Representative John R. Logue, 69, "father of Sunday baseball in Boston," died today at his home, Union Park street, following a two months' illness.

Solemn high mass will be held in the Cathedral of the Holy Cross Monday morning, with burial services to follow at St. Joseph's cemetery, West Roxbury.

A prominent undertaker, Logue had begun his career as a newsboy at the age of 11. He later worked for the Boston Evening American.

Kidnaper Dies on Gallows

McAlester, Okla., June 19 (AP)—Arthur Gooch, 27, convicted kidnaper of two Texas officers, was hanged at the state prison here today—the first person executed for kidnaping under the Lindbergh law.

The gallows trap was sprung at 5:06 a. m. by Rich Owen, who has electrocuted 53 men, but never before witnessed a hanging.

A crowd estimated at more than 350 persons, including eight women, witnessed the execution.

The condemned man's death-cell farewell to his six-year-old son, Billy Joe, was:

"Don't get into any trouble, son."

The boy pleaded with death-row guards:

"Don't hang Daddy."

Late yesterday President Roosevelt declined to intercede for the second time, saying:

"Use of the executive power to modify the sentence imposed would be to render nugatory a law carefully considered by the Congress and designed to meet a national need."

THIS IS LIFE

By Robert E. Rogers

A week ago I received a letter from Henry Ford's secretary, informing me that a column printed some time back in April, which concerned the hundredth anniversary of the McGuffey Readers, had been called to Mr. Ford's attention and that he was sending me a set of the reprints which he had made and which he has on exhibition in his little red schoolhouse at the Wayside Inn.

ROBERT E. ROGERS

Yesterday the books arrived and I seldom have enjoyed a pleasanter afternoon than that which I spent looking over the seven volumes which have been so familiar to so many millions of American schoolboys and schoolgirls. The series began at the little sixty page Pictorial Electic Primer in tan boards with the picture of the little girl feeding the birds and the lists of one syllabled words copiously illustrated and, at the end, arranged in simple sentences. The pictures were well drawn and engraved and the print large and clear.

Copyrighted at First In Year of 1857

Next were the four New Electic Readers bound in blue boards, each with its pretty rural or domestic scene on the cover. All were first copyrighted in the year 1857 and recopyrighted in 1863.

Last come the more famous readers. McGuffey's New Fifth and New Sixth, much more substantial books, bound in dark green cloth with ornate old fashioned lettering, 340 and 450 pages respectively, and printed, unfortunately, in much smaller type than the readers for younger pupils. The theory of those days must have been that as you grew older your eyes improved.

Pedagogically the outstanding feature of the readers, was the care taken over syllable division, accents, marks and pauses for clear oral reading and, in the later, volumes, brief definitions and guides to pronunciation. You can get a very exact sense of what the American language sounded like, at least in the middle West, before the Civil War, because Dr. McGuffey is very careful to show how words should not be pronounced.

From the primer up to the sixth reader, when the child supposedly left school, the teacher was never to leave off training children in exact spelling, proper syllabification, accent, emphasis, and expression. When I think of some of my Technology sophomores who, literally, cannot read a page aloud without hesitating and stumbling and choking, I find myself wishing that our moderns, teacher and pupil alike, had been trained on McGuffey's.

Moral and Ethical Content Are Features

Educationally—as opposed to pedagogically—the outstanding feature of the readers was moral and ethical content. The little stories were frequently pretty naive but none lacked its moral.

As early as the Second Reader little verses familiar even today are introduced; Twinkle, Twinkle, Little Star; Mary's Lamb; and in the Third, Don't Kill the Birds; Speak Gently; The Sluggard, and We Are Seven. The latter, by the way, is the first adult classic included in the series.

The method of the books seems to be that the pupil should be kept studying and reading aloud from quite simple material, until he shall be letter perfect in them. Then between the Fourth and Fifth is a considerable jump, so far as the difficulty and maturity are concerned, and in the Sixth, probably the last that the ordinary pupil used, the material is almost entirely selected from Shakespeare and other classical English and American selections, including the most familiar.

Modern Education Makes No Advances

Only yesterday the Missus's mother, who was brought up in Wisconsin in the days after the war, and prepared for Madison, looked over these reprints, really replicas, and with lively pleasure saw that she remembered them and thought that she still possessed some tucked away somewhere. She remembered how she was trained particularly in emphasis and expression, as the be-all and end-all of reading.

I am more obliged than I can say to possess these books. It was a fine and useful thing that Henry Ford did in having them made and giving them, I hope, a wide distribution. In many things I am convinced, modern education has made no advances on the old. Of that fact these books are splendid examples.

ANN MARSTERS IN HOLLYWOOD

Bing Crosby Just Knows He Is Not Cut Out To Act

The Boston Evening American presents herewith the thirteenth story in a series of intimate glimpses into the life of filmland's capital—"ANN MARSTERS IN HOLLYWOOD." Miss Marsters is being given entree to all of the studios, and is writing her stories from behind the scenes in the land of make-believe. These stories will appear daily.

By ANN MARSTERS

Hollywood, Cal., June 19—Bing Crosby looked very comfortable in his cowboy outfit. He looked as though he would be quite at home on the back of a galloping pony, or else lounging beside a hayloft, chewing a piece of hay the color of his hair and singing a song to the moon.

But he can't do any such things, at the moment, for this is not "the great out-of-doors." It is a Paramount sound stage, where Bing Crosby is making "Rhythm on the Range."

So Bing can lounge only upon the chairs about the set, and he must sing his songs to an unromantic microphone.

He sang a few notes to me, too. Not that he goes around singing to everyone he meets—he was merely preparing his throat for the next scene.

Sees No Romance In Self or Voice

Bing, I must tell you right away, can't imagine why anyone should find anything the least bit romantic about either his voice or himself.

His voice, he said, is merely the instrument with which he earns his living — and when Bing Crosby sings he gets well paid for it.

"I don't know what I'd do or where I'd be if I couldn't sing," he said, matter-of-factly, "because singing is about the only thing I can do that's worth anything in cold cash.

"I haven't any illusions about being able to act—and I haven't any ambition to be an actor."

In Hollywood you'll find that most of the singers and dancers who have become famous because of their specialized talents are terribly anxious to appear in pictures in which they'll have an opportunity to really ACT.

"I can understand the reasoning behind that attitude," said Bing. "I suppose they feel that they'll last longer as an actor than as a singer or dancer.

"But I feel that if you're a singer, the audiences want to hear you sing; and if you're a dancer, they want to see you dance. That's where your value lies, and you should 'make hay while the sun shines.'"

Bing Gives Self Only Year More

Bing doesn't expect the sun to go on shining forever. But I think he could be a little more optimistic about it than he is, for he said:

"I give myself about a year more.

"I really think that the public will tire of me by that time, and I want to be all ready to step out of the picture.

"Still—I may be wrong, and I hope I am. But this is a jittery, uncertain business. You can last years longer than even you yourself think you will—and you can fade out just like that," and he snapped his fingers to illustrate how quickly he's prepared to "disappear."

"We know when we're riding high by the amount of our pay checks," he went on, "but no actor here in Hollywood really knows the public's opinion of him. We're so far away from it, you know."

It is true that the stars don't cause much of a stir in Hollywood itself. The greatest of them can go walking down the street quite unmolested.

The citizens of Hollywood are used to them, you see, and they don't stare worshipfully at them, any more than you would stare at your next-door neighbor.

Fans So Fickle, Tide Changes Quickly

But once outside of Hollywood, they frequently get a vague idea of "public opinion" by being practically torn asunder by adoring fans.

"There's that, of course," said Bing, "but movie fans, too, are very uncertain things to bet on. The tide can change so quickly.

"So I'd rather not have too high an idea of my own standing—and I won't have so far to fall. Disillusion is bound to come to any star who thinks he can last indefinitely."

Even if he lasts only a year more, it's not going to break Bing Crosby's heart. He's saving his money—and besides, there are other things in life, says Bing, besides being a movie star.

There are, in Bing's life, three children—Gary, aged three, and the twins, Philip and Dennis, who will be two years old in July. There is his wife, Dixie Lee. There is his lovely Colonial home near Toluca Lake in Hollywood. There are, also, his five dogs—and his ambition to write short stories "some day."

So the future isn't worrying Crosby, no matter how it turns out.

Hopes New Picture Will Be Success

For the time being he's just hoping that "Rhythm on the Range" will be a "hit."

"And it looks to me," he said, "as though it's going over with a bang."

The rodeo set for the picture is one of the largest ever used in Hollywood, he told me. It's an exact replica of Madison Square Garden in New York—complete with chutes for bulls, steers, cows and horses. And there are seats for more than 1000 persons in the stands.

World famous rodeo riders have been brought to Hollywood to ride and to do their tricks in rodeo sequences.

Of course, Bing rides in the rodeo, too. He plays the part of a cowhand, whose greatest asset (even on the screen) turns out to be his ability to croon.

"Making pictures is a pleasant enough business," he said, "and, if I must work for a living, I'd rather do this than anything else I can think of. But I still don't like to get up early in the morning—except to play golf."

Next to golf, he likes yachting and fishing—and bright-colored sweaters. Or perhaps candy would come before sweaters in his affections. He adores candy—but he knows he shouldn't eat it, because it might make him too fat to appear romantic.

I almost neglected to tell you that Bing Crosby's real name is Harry Lillis Crosby. (He shudders at the mention of his middle name.)

He got his nickname when he was a little boy in Spokane, Washington. He used to play soldier astride a broomstick and shout, "Bing! Bing!"

Meet Anne Shirley, one of Hollywood's newest stars with "Ann Marsters in Hollywood" in tomorrow's Boston Evening American.)

ANN MARSTERS BING CROSBY

"When the boo-blue of the night—!" Yes, it's old Bing Crosby, crooner extraordinary, singing the songs of his newest Paramount picture, "Rhythm in the Range," for Ann Marsters, Boston Evening American feature writer, right on the Hollywood lot. Crosby is looking forward to at least one more good year. After that, if fans turn thumbs down on him, he'll retire and write short stories, he tells Ann.

Portable Radios May Aid Reporters

Washington, June 19 (INS)—Possibly that newspaper reporters may soon be towing the streets with portable radio sets, communicating directly with their editors, was presented to the Federal Radio Commission by J. J. McNary, representing Hearst Radio, Inc.

"We foresee", McNary said, "that needs will be expressed for allocation for ultra-high-frequencies for a new service—that of press pickup for two-way transmission of voice or printer messages between the roving reporter and the city desk of the newspaper, or the news editor of the broadcasting station. Our own experiments in this field have been on a frequency of 44 megacycles, with promising results."

GIRL ABOUT TOWN

By Ann Marsters

Hollywood, Calif., June 19—There's a new trend in movieland that seems to be growing stronger every day. It's the husband and wife team on the screen.

ANN MARSTERS

For a long time the mere idea of a wife appearing opposite her husband, or vice versa, was met with loud protests from both sides. Now married couples are begging to do pictures together.

For instance, there is the case of young John Beal, who is co-starring with Anne Shirley in "M'liss." His wife, Helen Craig, is appearing on the New York stage, and RKO has promised Beal that they will bring Miss Craig to Hollywood to be co-featured with him.

Fredric March and his wife, Florence Eldridge, are so determined to work together that they are going to New York to do a play.

Heather Angel and husband, Ralph Forbes, are going to produce a play in England, which they hope Hollywood will buy and pair them in on the screen.

Joan Crawford and Franchot Tone are anxious to appear in a production together.

"Exs" Hit It Off Well on Screen, Too

And ex-husbands and ex-wives seem to be getting along splendidly as co-stars. So much so, that Henry Fonda and Margaret Sullavan started re-romance rumors when they were making "The Moon's Our Home."

So did Carole Lombard and Bill Powell who have been working on "My Man Godfrey." A lot of people have asked them how it felt for an ex-husband and ex-wife to be sharing film honors.

But Carole and Bill would merely smile in answer—and Bill would go on kissing Carole lightly on the lips before nearly every scene.

Katharine Hepburn's moodiness sometimes surprises even herself.

The other night she started out for the theater where her recently completed "Mary of Scotland" was being shown. She arrived in front of the theater, got an attack of the jitters, and refused to go any farther. Her chauffeur drove her a few blocks away and Hepburn sat in the car and read a book under the street lights.

When the film was over, her manager, Leland Hayward, brought her the report that the audience had clapped and cheered. Hepburn frowned and said:

"I can't understand why I didn't go."

A Horse Without Filling for Curtiz

People who know Director Michael Curtiz, are forever teasing him and telling stories about his use of English.

Curtiz, a Hungarian, is directing "The Charge of the Light Brigade" at Warners. He has been a strong man in a circus, a lieutenant in the Austrian army, and he directed pictures in Austria, Sweden, France and Denmark before he came to Hollywood. But he has long since given up what he considers an unequal battle with our difficult language.

One day he wanted riderless horses to be brought onto the "Light Brigade" set, and he called:

"Bring on the empty horses."

And another time, when he had sent an assistant to do something and the assistant did it improperly, he shouted:

"The next time I send a dumb somebody I send myself."

The White Dope: 24-Hour Reprieve From Black Plague

New York, N. Y., June 19.

A PERT SPLATTER of rain halted the sticking that was scheduled for the Yankee Stadium last evening and Max Schmeling, the Nazi heavyweight fighter, who is sometimes called the Black Uhlan and sometimes the big White Dope, gained a short but merciless reprieve from the sepia headsman.

Austen Lake

It was cruelty to everything except the thirsty earth and the green sprouts which stretched their roots in the parched soil and raised their leafy arms in thanksgiving. And when the postponement came some 400 fight-weary journalists unboxed their typewriters for an extra spasm of metaphor and searched their souls for new-glory words about a topic that is worn thin as a politician's conscience.

Except for the down-pour Schmeling would have had his hatcheting over and be curing himself in the hospital calm of a downtown hotel, where he could take inventory of his agonies, including the general after effect of a train wreck and a face full of surgical fiddlegut. He would have had $150,000 to buy plaster, tape and medical gauze. But as it is his period of intestinal convulsion was drawn out another twenty-four hours.

It was only raining rain along the streets called the Hardened Artery. But it was raining anguish into the souls of the Jacobs boys, Mike-the-Bite and Yussel-the-Muscle, who are among the most talented exploiters of our sucker population. Mike is the producer of this mammoth Punch and Judy carnival and the wizard who invented a system of sweating one ticket to make two profits.

He contrives this ingenious stunt by scalping his own shows and selling his choicest seats over the tail board at a surcharge.

UNDIGESTED MEAL TICKETS

MR. YUSSEL JACOBS is a kind of commercial scavenger who holds a generous piece of Max Schmeling and who, in his own turn, has pieces of himself distributed among Broadway's money-lenders. So, though he owns a third of Max, he does not own any of himself, including skin and bones, of which he is composed.

The rain did not compare in volume and wetness to the shower of tears which the Jacobs boys wept over the prospect of having to devour whole rackfuls of tickets which were still unclaimed by absentee customers. And the two stood in the foyer of the Hippodrome after the weighing-in exercises yesterday, wailing a lachrymose duet that ran down the tiled floor and into the gutters of Sixth avenue. Mike wept in a basso profundo with a heavy Russian tinge and Yussel wept a mezzo-soprano of a lighter, boo-boo burlesque role.

They gave a pretty rendition in the effect of a Negro spiritual with some of Mike's pavement pedlars furnishing subdued background of sobs. The curbstone stooges found the suckers had developed caloused from past gouging and were proving hard to bleed at $40 rates. So they were dumping their bundles back in the 20th Century Club's warehouse and returning to the more placid and profitable profession of panhandling for nickels and dimes.

But despite the downpour, the weighing-in ceremonies at the Hippodrome provided a dramatic scene with the gawdy interior of the big show palace mobbed by official hangers-on and political grifters who came for the dramatics and stayed for the buffet-luncheon which was served on the stage at the fight club expense.

Large bullseye-lights throw fingers of dazzle from the ceiling into a central oval where the animal acts and muscle operas normally take place. Herded by cops the spectators swarmed up the inclines and sat on red plush seats while batteries of cameramen let off the patent flash bulbs at the boxing commission, which wore clean shirts and had their faces washed for the occasion.

WAYS OF THE WEIGHERS

THE MOB WANTED to get at the free lunch but a cordon of cops held them back until after the official business was completed. And presently from one tunnel came Max Schmeling, attended by his tin-can court, and from another come Joe Louis, surrounded by members of the African nobility. They converged in the middle of the oval and peeled off their satin gowns, standing very sleek and nude while they took turns stepping on the weighing platform.

An official crier shouted the figures of each man, including the name of the lower-case, multia politician who was doing the job. And then, for the sake of modesty, Louis put on a pair of black trunks and Schmeling stepped into a pair of purple ones and the boxing commission laid their chins on the fighters' shoulders to make an imperishable, photographic record of the historic moment.

It was all charged to the ballyhoo account with the fighters looking very bored and naked in the vast theater. And while they posed this way and that for their portraits, the mob filtered through the cops and played grabs for the platters of cold cuts, carrying handfuls of food up on the plush slopes and hanging their feet over the balcony rails while feeding their faces.

After a while the fighters and their trains marched into their tunnels and the big overhead bullseyes blinked out, leaving the place in twilight. The last crust and crumb of food was gone, so the crowd went, too.

dim tonight. Mike Jacobs of the 20th Century Club will immediately open the Brown Bomber to cash with Jimmy Braddock in a world's championship match which will be held in September.

Braddock is under contract to defend his title for the New York Garden, but he says this organization cannot secure the services of Louis who is under contract to box exclusively for the 20th Century Club for a period of five years.

Braddock declares this condition will entitle him to break his contract with the Garden.

Meanwhile the Garden is planning to name John Henry Lewis, world's light heavyweight champion as an opponent for Braddock in the event it is unable to make a deal that will bring Louis under its banner.

Louis continues to rule a 6 to 1 betting choice for his battle with Schmeling tonight.

How many rounds will the fight last?

This is the only question that is concerning Broadway in regard to the big fight. Almost everybody agrees that Louis will win. The only doubt in the minds of most of the fans is as to the number of rounds Der Max will be able to stand up in front of Louis' terrific punching.

I look for Louis to win, but I think Schmeling will give him a real fight while he is in there tonight. Max was never a great heavyweight but nobody disputes his courage and his confidence in himself.

Schmeling at 192 pounds is in perfect condition for tonight's ring quarrel. He came through the training period unmarked, and will have all of his power when he faces the destructive Louis.

The burden will be on Louis tonight. He is rated as a sure thing and will be expected to step out and kayo Schmeling quickly. If he fails to do so, he may run into serious difficulties.

Schmeling does not intend to take reckless chances in the early stages of the bout. He plans to put up a careful, defensive battle in an effort to make Louis miss, and find an opening for his own devastating right hand sock.

BOUT SPONSOR SEES MORE CUSTOMERS

By DAMON RUNYON

(Copyright, 1936, by Universal Service)

New York, June 19—We don't know just how the Messrs. Schmeling and Louis feel about the postponement of their rather widely advertised meeting, but for a man with a lot of money involved, M. Strauss Jacobs, the promoter, is strangely calm.

Instead of dissolving into tears as is the usual custom of pugilistic promoters confronted with a postponement, M. Strauss smiled at the rain and remarked that it would wet down his $30,000 "set-up" of ringside seats at the Yankee Stadium very nicely, which he would have to do anyway as a fire precaution.

It may be that the smile masked a slowly breaking heart, of course. None the less, M. Strauss argued, cheerfully, that the postponement of the fight would help rather than hurt the gate, presumably on the theory that it would give him more time for the sale of tickets.

It certainly is a boon to the New York hotels and cafes because it will give them at least an extra day of business with the thousands of visitors who came in from all parts of the country the last couple of days for the fight. It has been estimated that this particular fight will bring around $2,000,000 cash money to New York business from the visitors.

This estimate was without reference to the extra day, so let's add another $250,000 to the figure. It should comfort M. Strauss to know that he is a public benefactor, no matter what happens to him.

Postponement of a big event is the sports promoter's nightmare.

Once in a great while he benefits by it, as a rule, however, delay "murders" him.

The only sport that likes postponements is baseball. The magnates love to pile up double-headers. They think the bargain bill helps business.

If the promoter of a big fight, such as the Louis-Schmeling affair, has a sell-out before he opens his gates, of course he doesn't mind the postponement, except in that he likes to get the thing over with before one of the principals gets hit by a street car.

But if he still has a lot of seats for sale and is depending largely on the last-minute window trade, as they have come to do in New York of late years, then postponement is very tough on the promoter. A raft of people who plan to attend a certain event on a certain night often change their plans when the postponement comes up.

The window trade for a big fight in New York has become almost as important as the advance sale. In bygone years it was the custom of the pugilistic patrons to buy their tickets well in advance. Now many wait until the last minute, as is evidenced by the fact that a window sale often runs over $100,000 the night of the fight.

That's the business the postponement sometimes damages.

We don't know just how much money M. Jacobs has in his till on the advance sale. He is always a mysterious fellow on that point, but has suggested that it is around $600,000, which was our estimate of the total gate when the match was first made.

The guesses at the receipts, based on this advance, have run all the way from $500,000 to $800,000. We doubt the last figure. We would say that $500,000 net, which is less the federal and state taxes, would be remarkable. Anything over that is velvet.

The fact that the postponement pushes the fight into the week-end may help the gate. New Yorkers are chronic week-enders, and as a rule fight promotors shy off from dates in the summer time that put them around Saturday. The New Yorkers plan their week-ends well in advance.

Sometimes a postponement of a fight favors one fighter and is to the great disadvantage of the other, though we doubt that this applies either way in the case of Louis and Schmeling.

The fighter who gains by a disappointment is the nervious fellow, who isn't affected by waiting, especially if his opponent is the nervous, jittery type. Louis and Schmeling both happen to be extremely phlegmatic. They are not the kind that get all keyed up to a certain moment and are apt to go to pieces if that big moment is deferred.

Probably both Louis and Schmeling rather welcomed a respite of a few hours more, especially Louis, who is never hurried about anything, and never has anywhere to go, or anything to do after a fight. Joe seems to prefer life in a training camp to anything else. Schmeling has a one-track mind, and doesn't worry, though he isn't exactly in love with training.

Champion Braddock Fears Delay May Upset Joe Louis' Poise

By JAMES J. BRADDOCK

New York, June 19 (US)—Rain, which caused a postponement of the Joe Louis-Max Schmeling fight until tonight, and may even cause more delay, might play an important role in this important fight.

They were all tensed up to step into the ring at the stadium last night when this unexpected downpour started, and I'm inclined to think that the delay will hurt Louis more than it will Schmeling. Then, again, it may have no effect at all.

Louis, however, has never been faced with a delay like this. He's used to finishing training, going calmly through his weighing-in ceremonies and then getting the fight over with.

If there should be another postponement today, they will have to weigh in again before the fight. Louis is only 22, and, although he's seemed so cool and almost bored with things, I believe this delay is working on his nervous system. He's young and he's human, isn't he?

CINCY Here for 3 GAMES

LANNING HURLS FOR BEES

By DAVE EGAN

Having successively won three out of four contests from the league-leading St. Louis Cardinals, the Boston Bees will now divert their attention to the Cincinnati Reds, who are in town for a three-game series.

The Reds, if it comes as any news to you, are in fifth place, only two and a half games ahead of our boys, and Manager "Wullie" McKechnie will do some intense master-minding in the next three days in a serious effort to think the Bees into the top of the second division.

I do not know how he happened to think of Rob Smith shortly before 3 o'clock yesterday, but it was a most successful bit of bright thinking, for the venerable Smith toyed with the Cardinals, permitting two hits in the nine innings allowing only two of the visiting firemen to get as far as second base, granting but one base on balls and pitching to only 30 of the vipers.

After Terry Moore walked a double to left center to start the meeting, Elder Smith started elbowing away with such vigor that when John Mize singled, he asked for a formal introduction to Ray or Jordan, Marwh. e. 25 of the Cardinals had been retired in something that bore a close resemblance to one-two-three order.

Great Hurling

It was an superb a pitching performance as you are likely to see what with his jack-rabbit ball exploding in pitcher's teeth, and it seems a pity that not more than 2000 persons tenanted the pews.

Down the years, it has been said that Boston is a great baseball town, but your envoy is beginning to doubt it. The Bees, day in and day out, are playing sure-fisted fighting, intelligent baseball. Give them a little pitching, and they will score themselves a few runs.

The infield of Jordan, Cuccinello Urbanski, and Hasiin, is packed with power. Berger, Lee, and Gene Moore form a capable outfield. Al Lopes is one of the finest catchers in the game.

And now that I have worked myself into a great uproar, I might as well go the whole way and tell you that I would much rather see the Bees play at baseball than the Red Sox. The dice will come over one of these days for both "Wullie" McKechnie and Bob Quinn, and that, my friends, will be the day.

Our boys enter the Cincinnati series with high hopes of snagging their share of the three engagements. Out in Ohio-hoo-hoo recently, they captured three of the four games. Al Hollingsworth, the young left-hander, beat them 4-0 in that series, and it is expected by the better minds of the press box that Hollingsworth will be the nominee of Manager Charlie Dressen this afternoon.

The Bees, it is presumed, will rely on young John Lanning. If young John only knew all the things about pitching that old Bobby Smith does, it would be safe to count another victory for the Bees. But young John will have to hang around for several years before he can absorb all the little things that make a great pitcher and meanwhile, he will be out there doing the best he can.

Red Sox Have Off Day

By JOE CASHMAN

Chicago, June 10—This off-day isn't enjoyed by the majority of our Red Sox for several reasons, among which are:

1—They must pay for the vacation to the extent of laboring through a Sunday doubleheader with the bothersome Browns in sultry St. Louis.

2—They'll be traveling from here to the Mound City between the hours of 6 and 11 p. m. (E. S. T.) when they're most anxious to be stationary within the range of some radio station broadcasting the lowdown of the Louis-Schmeling battle.

3—They're all burned up over dropping the "rubber" of the three-game series with the Chicago White Sox and being shut out by Johnny Whitehead in the bargain.

4—They're depressed no little over finding themselves 4½ games behind the pace-setting Yankees, the furthest they've been from the roof all season.

Perry 7 to 4 Net Choice In England

London, June 19 (AP)—So certain are British tennis fans that Fred Perry, all-England champion, will defend and retain his title Monday [illegible] today defeating Jack Crawford in straight sets, 7 to 5, 6 to 4, 6 to 4.

Bookmakers were offering 7 to 4 on Baron Gottfried von Cramm of Germany, finalist against Perry last year and the Davis cup star in the recent French championship.

Jack Crawford of Australia and Frederick Perry Budge of Oakland, Cal., were tied at 4 to 1 when Fanny Austin, Wimbledon champion, and Adrian Quist, Australian title, were quoted at 10 to 1.

15 TO 1 Louis Will WIN

SPECULATORS HOLDING BAG

New York, June 19 (AP)—Very latest fight dope: Odds on Joe Louis probably will shoot to 15 to 1 by post time tonight.

Louis was a 10 to 1 shot at midnight, with few takers . . . Puzzle: Find an experienced fight critic who likes Schmeling's chances.

On the other hand, did any experienced fight critic tour own Eddie Neil excepted) pick Braddock to lick Max Baer . . . All the experts are agreed Maxo only chance to win is to get in a knock with a single punch right at the start.

Look, while the fight will do the old flopperoo . . . Speculators are in a turn to unload "choice" seats at large prices . . . Those who waited two weeks ago when they could get $27.50 seats at will be interested to know there are seats at them . . . Bill Carey, former president of the Garden who sold 1200 tickets, has turned back three-fourths of them.

Ouch! . . . Hype Igoe, veteran fight writer of the Evening Journal, says the difference between the two men is that where Schmeling has one good hand Louis has two, either as deadly as Maxo best.

Need Glasses

More than 1000 newspapermen [illegible] working press seats . . . Max Jacobs had to build two extra press boxes . . . Even at that [illegible] are immediate about [illegible] because of the non-workers who somehow managed to crash into the press section.

Representatives of some of the biggest papers in the country will have to use the obsequies for schooling from the grandstand . . . Better bring your field glasses boys.

Frank Wallace author of "Kid Galahad" [illegible] the fight as follows: "The Big Fight," a 20th century Fund production at the Yankee Stadium Association production, Mike Jacobs. Original story by Tex Rickard . . . Screen play by Francis Albertanti and Welch St. Denis . . . Additional dialogue by Joe Jacobs . . . Technicolor effects by General Phelan of the Public Parking Commission . . . Leading man, Joe Louis."

Odds and ends: Doctors say Primo Carnera's paralyzed leg will come around, O. K. . . . The New York Giants will [illegible] Jack Haden 200-pound tackle, late of Arkansas University at Fayetteville . . . Contrary to reports [illegible] Jacobs [illegible] the old "Minnesota Thresher" prize ring fame, is not on the rocks . . .

In the Money

Don't worry about Mr. Fulton, please . . . Joe Louis will sign to fight Jimmy Braddock within the next [illegible] ending the worries of Little Joe Gould . . . Broadway is humming with reports that the [illegible] Mike Jacobs has found a way to get Braddock away from the Garden.

Finland Seeking Olympics for '40

Helsingfors, June 19 (AP)—Making a belated but concerted drive to land the 1940 Olympic games Finland already has drawn up tentative plans to provide accommodations for visitors.

The cost of the project is estimated at $1,250,000.

Dodger Baseball Club Reported Sold

New York, June 19 (INS)—Another rumor that the Brooklyn Dodgers are about to be sold was going the Broadway rounds today.

This time the prospective buyer is said to be a Mid-Western millionaire, Lou Wentz, of Pittsburgh.

Vice-President Joseph Gilleaudeau, acting for the Ebbets interests, who, with Judge Stephen McKeever, control the Dodgers' stock equally, was said to have discussed the deal with Wentz several weeks ago.

The club, including the National League franchise, Ebbets Field and valuation of players, is assessed at $2,500,-

Ann Marsters' Best Bets

Hollywood, Cal., June 19—It was one out of three again in my choices yesterday but this time the victor returned enough to give my bankroll a boost which I hope will continue today.

BARON LYNN took the second race at Suffolk Downs to return $14.20 win and place. COLONEL GREENE, my other choice at the East Boston racing strip, was unplaced and STOOL PIGEON ran third at Agawam. With a $2.20 profit on my $12 play, the bankroll now stands at $455.70.

Continuing my cross-country selecting today, I'm picking FINISHER to be the first finisher in the sixth at Suffolk and UNLAWFUL to win the sixth event at Agawam. It's $2 win, $2 place on each one.

ANN MARSTERS

$2 WIN AND $2 PLACE
Unlawful, 6th, Agawam
Finisher, 6th, Suffolk
Bankroll Now $455.70. Day's Play $8.

(At the suggestion of Walter O'Hara, Miss Marsters has set out to determine that conservative bets can result in satisfactory profits, or at worst small losses. Walter O'Hara, Narragansett Park owner, provided the capital with a $1000 gift. Half was turned over to the Boston Evening American Christmas Fund immediately. The remainder will be similarly handled at the end of the experiment. This is the sixty-eighth day.)

Grounded Jockey Faces Life Layoff

London, June 19 (AP)—Arthur Wragg, youngest of three famous brother jockeys, has been ruled off the British turf indefinitely after an inquiry into his riding of Hokrood at Epsom.

The verdict means that Wragg, who is 24 and newly married, may never ride again. A British Jockey Club suspension is for life, or until the stewards decide to reinstate the offender.

DOCILE DANNO RUNS WILD AT NAHANT

Robert Again Insult Added to Injury

—By DAVE EGAN—

Wilfrid Yvon Robert, the young man who MAY (Get it, my frans from southern Boston?) win the heavyweight title from Danno O'Mahony next Tuesday, never realized that he would become a rassler, even after he had scored a decisive fall over his first bottle of Grade A.

Hunting and trapping was right in the cards for Yvon, and he could hunt and trap and snoot like all get-out but his family decided that it was time to have an artisan in the family.

Robert Maurice, a member of the Royal Canadian Mounted Police, Brother Andrew, a provincial detective, Yvon, short Uncle Alphonse, police justice, and Papa Robert Yvon would rest at home and maybe he would be a pee honor black-smith.

So he went to Technical School in Montreal and there he studied blacksmithing and also cement and real business and no doubt he would have been a big blacksmither executive or such except for the fact that he has a decided interest in athletics of all sorts.

The young man played a good game of rugby and he excelled at fencing, which is more than average in hockey. In Montreal, hockey is a religion, and the hockey scouts had eagle eyes on two young fellows who played on the Technical school varsity team. Bunk Mates

One of them was a husky youth named Jean Pusie, and the other was Yvon Robert. They were both offered contracts to join the hockey league and Pusie accepted. Last year, he was one of the most colorful figures on the Bruin Cubs, and his room-mate, up on Park Drive in Boston, was Yvon Robert.

But Yvon was not here as a hockey player at the time. He was here trying to shout his way into a match with Danno O'Manony, the new wrestling sensation, and he was telling all comers that Danno would be an easy touch for him.

Because when Robert was going to Technical School in Montreal, an old heavyweight wrestler named Emile Maupas said to him, "Some day, son, you can be a great wrestler. God has given you a marvelous physique, a strong neck, a good pair of legs, and a combative soul. Play hockey, and rugby, and baseball, but come to me when you are through at Technical School, and I think I can make you a wrestler."

So Robert did not go along with Jean Pusie when the latter signed to join the hockey leagues. He worked around Montreal as a blacksmith, and, in an old, ill-lighted gymnasium with Emile Maupas, he started on the narrow, rocky path which has led him to the wrestling heights.

He learned his lessons in wrestling for three years before Emile turned him loose, and then he wrestled for two years as an amateur before old Emile said, "I've taught you what I know, Yvon. You should be a good professional wrestler. Go ahead, boy, and may God bless you."

If Wilfrid Yvon Robert is truly a great wrestler, I think that the credit should be given largely to Maupas. In his day he was heavyweight champion of Canada and one of the best known wrestlers on the continent.

More Treason

Many of the modern wrestlers have been taken bodily off a football gridiron and thrown into a wrestling ring, to do the best they can. Gus Sonnenberg was a sensation for a time, simply because of his dash and fire and savage aggressiveness, but it did not take the old-time wrestlers long to catch up with him and bring him down to their size.

Jim McMillen was another, and Tiny Roebuck, and Len Macaluso and scores more. They were fine young athletes, gifted with a competitive sense and they succeeded in part.

Many students of wrestling will tell you that Danno lacks the background of a wrestler, that he is the same type as Sonnenberg and McMillen and Roebuck and Macaluso and the others, and that he will, sooner or later, be cut down to his size.

And many a wise old owl will tell you that the three years Wilfrid Yvon Robert spent learning his rassling lessons from Emile Maupas will mean the difference between defeat and victory when he stacks up against Danno at the Garden next Tuesday night.

"He's got what the horsemen call breeding," old Jack Albright said yesterday. "He has a wrestling background."

Manager Fears for Robert's Safety at Basket Fund Match

YVON Trains at WOBURN

REFEREE STILL UNPICKED

There is a great uproar and hammering and yammering out at Nahant about how Danno O'Mahony, preparing for his battle with Yvon Robert, Tuesday night at Boston Garden, has turned bad man.

The usual docile Irishman has been vicious in his recent workouts. He used a body slam Tuesday, giving Charley Webb, a training mate, a slight concussion and he man-handled his other partners, John Malmberg and Joe Kujot.

Yesterday 3000 fans gathered around the ring at the Relay House saw Malmberg quit after six minutes, with blood pouring from split lips, and watched Kujot leave the ring with a mouse over one eye and a puffed nose.

But the real drama in the workout came when Webb, against his doctor's orders, insisted on working with Danno again and found himself in midair, ready to be on the receiving end of another body slam. Trainer Freddie Moran, remembering Tuesday's casualty, leaped toward the center of the ring, grabbed O'Mahony and ordered him not to slam Webb. Fans, many of whom had watched Danno maim Webb the day before, applauded Moran's action.

Is New Man

"Say, this Irishman is a new man," Moran declares. "He is better than he has been at any time in his career. He has turned into a wild man and I'd hate to receive the licking Robert will take Tuesday night. Danno will not be satisfied with just a victory Tuesday—he hasn't forgotten how Robert has humiliated him and wants to give the young French Canadian a shellacking he'll never forget."

This O'Mahony, usually not so keen for training, keeps busy all hours of the day at his training camp. He goes on the road early in the morning, takes a brisk rubdown and breakfasts.

Then he goes fishing or rowing until time for his ring work early in the afternoon. After his workout in the ring he eats a heavy meal and then takes a long walk. A card game or reading occupies his time until he is ready for bed at 9 p. m., when Trainer Moran gives orders for lights to go out.

"I was afraid Danno would go stale, so asked him to take it easy yesterday," Moran said. "Well, you see how easy he took it. Or, if you didn't, you can ask Malmberg, Webb or Kujot."

Meanwhile Robert's supporters lost a slight bit of confidence in their man's chances when he failed to appear at the White Spot, Woburn Four Corners, yesterday for his scheduled drill. Robert, driving back from Montreal, where he defeated Jack Washburn in straight falls Wednesday night, encountered car trouble just outside of Montreal and did not get into Boston until last night.

Quinn Confident

"Don't worry about Yvon," Eddie Quinn, his manager, said. "Right now he is in shape to take Danno. That match with Washburn equalled a half-dozen of the kind of workouts Danno is taking, and Yvon really didn't need a workout yesterday."

The French Canadian will be at the White Spot today, tomorrow, Sunday and Monday, dealing out punishment to the Olson twins, John Spellman and Arthur LeGrand. He'll start each day at 2 p. m.

"And they'll be workouts worth going miles to see," Quinn added.

Roberts's father, mother, two sisters and two brothers are enroute here by automobile from Montreal. Besides, several hundred Canadian admirers of Yvon have reserved tickets for the big show.

Although the match is but four days away, no referee has been selected, and it appears the American Wrestling Association officials will have to select the third man.

Jack McGrath, Danno's manager is insistent that the assignment be given a local man, and Eddie Quinn is just as insistent that the work goes to an out-of-town referee.

DANNO TEACHES DANNO. Little Danno Kelley of Nahant decided it was time to take Danno O'Mahony in tow and teach him the Irish whip as it should be used in preparation for big Danno's match for the title against Yvon Robert at Boston Garden next Tuesday night for the Boston Evening American Christmas Basket Fund.

U. S. Weak in Sea Polo

Berlin, June 19 (US [illegible] Hungary is out to grab the water polo crown at the Olympics [illegible] for the second consecutive time, and has a good chance [illegible] its wish.

It's a cinch that the [illegible] this roughest of sports will remain in Europe, with the U. S. A. [illegible] ing up spray in second [illegible] place, if not worse. The trouble is that we Yanks don't go at this type of sport as systematically as these Europeans, whose manpower is no better, but [illegible] they pick a darn good team early and stick to it.

Hungary's world champion team this year will have to defend its title against 11 teams from across the world.

[illegible] by the same country twice in succession since England won it for the second time in 1912. Hungary has a chance this year to repeat. England a feat, and the whole world is out to stop them.

I look for the New York A. C. to shoot the strongest team in the country and the rest one of the old teams that hasn't more or less disbanded. The coaches, Johnny Curan and Joe Ruddy, have had the boys in tow for the past four months working together at least three nights a week. Saw them on the way through and they looked quite good. Even so, Johnny and Joe Ruddy are in favor of the home-like Mackenzie, Cobb, Hazelhurst and Brannigan are in favor of [illegible] team, so I guess that a won't it will be.

Omaha May Meet Filly In Match

Ascot, England, June 19 (US)—America's quest of the elusive Ascot Gold Cup, the world's oldest and most famous of races on the flat, had ended in failure again today as William Woodward's Omaha was beaten by Lord Stanley's Quashed in a "handkerchief" finish.

Sportsmen demanded a special race between the pair to decide which horse is faster.

Quashed, a 4-year-old filly, downed America's 3-year-old champion of 1935, sired by Gallant Fox, in a stirring, dramatic battle down the stretch of the gruelling two and a half mile course and the finish was so close that it took a lengthy conference among the judges before the winner was announced.

There was growing agitation at the conclusion of the historic event, won only once in its 225-year-old history by an American invader, for a match race between Omaha and Quashed, similar to the famous special race between America's Zev and the French horse, Papyrus.

Jockey Perryman, who piloted Quashed, admitted after the race he thought the judges might even rule a dead heat.

Turf men here, however, are declaring that only a match race will decide which the two is the better horse. There is no listed race wherein the pair can meet under the terms of yesterday's thriller.

It was hinted that Woodward wouldn't be averse to the opportunity for a match race, and it is possible that Lord Stanley will agree if he retains his lease on Quashed, granted him by the filly's owner, Lady Barabara Smith.

McCarthy Subs for Cochrane As A. L. Star Pilot

Chicago, June 19 (AP)—Joe McCarthy, manager of the New York Yankees, was appointed today to lead the American League All-Stars against the National Leaguers at Boston Bees field July 7 because of the illness of Mickey Cochrane, manager of the world's champion Detroit Tigers.

Brubaker to Work At Quincy Gym

No less than a half dozen sparring partners have been hired already by Matchmaker Rip Valenti of the Goodwin A. C. to work with Phil Brubaker, punching partner from the Pacific Coast, who arrives here tomorrow to start training for his 10-round bout with Jack Sharkey.

Brubaker is scheduled to make his first gymnasium appearance here tomorrow at Boston's gymnasium in Quincy. He will also work out there Sunday, and will then shift to Kelley and Hayes gymnasium on Hanover street in Boston.

Brubaker is already in the east but has stopped off at New York.

Interest Lags In M. G. A. Opens | Failure Due To Management

—By BILL GRIMES

At the rate interest has been ebbing in M. G. A. open handicap medal play tournaments of late, that species of golf attractions will be as rare as horse drawn vehicles within a few years.

There are 37 open handicap medal play tournaments listed on the Massachusetts Golf Association schedule and of the 14 already played Brae Burn is the only one that attracted a worthwhile field.

In fact Brae Burn Marshfield ... had a ... for its open ... the appeal ... the golfers today ... for the one ... thing of every ... for to say ... Brae Burn ... Bill Grimes

Dwindling Open Fields Drop From 300 to Meager 100 or Less

Today, instead of figuring on how much they are going to profit from the open tournaments, clubs are on the alert to seek until the last entry is posted worrying if they'll break even on the cost of the prizes. And, to be truthful, many have failed, despite the fact that the output for prizes in many cases did not total much more than a week-end trip to a nearby summer resort.

Old Man Depression had a hand in applying the sads to open tournaments. In the old days, when golfers ranged from $3 to $5, there was some incentive to pay $2 to play in an open. But, with 50-cents bucks are stalled—or thought they were—to lower daily playing fees waive the 30-day restrictions, divide the fields into classes, according to handicap, and curtail on their appropriations for prizes, the open tournament players refused to be lured from their own club tournaments, where the entry fee is but fifty cents, and the pros seem to get their home professional.

Poor handicapping by club officials was another factor in the downfall of open tournaments. Too many members of clubs, where open tournaments were held, grabbed off the net prizes. And, in most cases with plenty of strokes to spare. There are clubs, at which members—at least some of them—have not had their handicaps cut in years, regardless of the calibre of golf they shoot.

Now, although I have never referred any sympathy for the ... putting" type of open tournament players, I do feel an appeal is due for them when they have a legitimate protest when they emit loud ... awake about 20 and over-grade prop pros who annually manage to come through with the best rounds of the careers during their open club season.

Right now indications are that there will be many less golfers flock to Attleboro from all sections of Massachusetts and Rhode Island.

But if any of the other 34 clubs, which have or are to stage open handicap medal play tourneys, attract enough players to offset the cost of the prizes, it will be because their members turned out in large numbers instead of relying upon the visitors to pull them out of the "red".

With the exception of Brae Burn, which attracted its usual large field from outside clubs, home club members have provided most of the entry fee received in the other 13 tournaments held this season. About one-half of every summer's ... is made up of members of the entertaining clubs. Had the members refused to put their $2 on the line there wouldn't have been a corporal's guard at any of the medal play tournaments this season.

Years ago clubs made substantial profits from the open tournaments, which drew from 150 to 300 entries, according to the length of the events. I remember when Hathaway set up an all-time record of 335 and when Sandy Burr went over that figure. But, with the three exceptions already mentioned, if a club attracts 150 golfers in a three-day event today, it has well boast of a remarkable turnout, for most of the fields are a score or more less than 100.

Fight Airing Broadcast Tonight

By N. F. T.

Between them Fate and the rain-gods made the big fight and the broadcasting thereof (WEEI and WBZ) impossible last evening.

Was it sort of a reprieve or last-minute stay of execution for husky young Herr Schmeling the boxer of Berlin?

Weather permitting, Max must face the two-fisted fury of Mammy Barrows' lil' buff-colored boy, Joseph Louis, at the same time tonight. Just about everybody not in attendance will be cupping eager ears to hear what happens, meaning at 10 o'clock. Should the Fatherland's favorite son surprise all hands around, there won't be much of a hot time in Harlem for a few nights and white hope excitement will subside before it gets under way.

Along the well-known WNAC wire is where to hear how Father Coughlin feels about things in general, particularly the impending political war between Landon and Roosevelt. Is scheduled over the 10:45 to 11:15 half hour this evening.

THE STORY OF NEW SUPER-FILM, 'HEARTS DIVIDED,' TOLD IN PICTURES

This is the fifth of six chapters telling by pictures the story of "Hearts Divided," the Warner Bros.-Cosmopolitan production starring Marion Davies and with Dick Powell, Claude Rains, Edward Everett Horton and Charlie Ruggles in the cast, which opens today at the Metropolitan Theater. Previous chapters related how Jerome Bonaparte, brother of Napoleon, became engaged to Betsy Patterson in America. Napoleon forbade the wedding, having arranged a political marriage for his brother. Hoping to change Napoleon's mind, the lovers boarded ship for France. Anchored off shore, they are drinking a toast to success when a sharp knock is heard. Now continue—

1—Jerome and Betsy pause as the door opens to reveal Napoleon, his face a cold mask. He briefly greets Jerome and turns to Betsy. "Perhaps Mademoiselle will permit me a little chat with her alone." Jerome protests, but Betsy pleads there is nothing to fear. Jerome leaves.

2—Napoleon, a great actor, convinces Betsy that she holds the fate of France in her hands, that France needs the armies of another nation and can get them only by Jerome's marriage to Princess Frederica of Wuerttemberg. Betsy agrees to give up Jerome and return to America.

3—Napoleon leaves and soon Jerome joins Betsy, who hurriedly hides her tears. "It is all settled," she says, with feigned happiness, allowing Jerome to believe she has won over the Emperor and that no further obstacles stand in the way of their romance. They drink a toast to their wedding and Betsy goes from the cabin.

4—On deck, Napoleon and her Aunt Helen await her. He escorts her to the rowboat waiting to take her to a vessel that will carry her to America. "Mademoiselle," he says, "an Emperor is grateful." As the rowboat disappears, Napoleon's aide, Lambaccres (Halliwell Hobbes) congratulates the Emperor on his excellence as an actor. (Concluded tomorrow.)

In Hands of Gypsies!

The Fight of a Mother to Save Her Babies From Kidnapers

By FLOYD GIBBONS

FLOYD GIBBONS

HELLO EVERYBODY:

You don't hear much of gypsies these days, do you? And yet I remember when those wandering nomads were the terror of the countryside. They took the places of the more "civilized" kidnapers of today and many were the stories told of babies and children taken from their homes and raised in a gypsy wagon to follow in the suspicious calling of their abductors.

I wonder what has happened to them. I suppose the gypsies drive automobiles now and we can't pick them out in the rush. I can remember my mother telling me never to go near a gypsy wagon. We kids didn't need that warning. We were as frightened of the dark-skinned, earring bedecked foreigners as our mothers were.

Mrs. Delia Foudy of Port Chester, N. Y., makes the club and the ten-spot today with a story of a horrible experience she had with gypsies some twenty years ago.

Mrs. Foudy was left a widow with two small children on her hands. The loss of her husband increased, if possible, the love she had for her babies. They were the apple of her eye. The boy was six and the little girl only three.

Mrs. Foudy searched for employment that would permit her to have her children with her and she found it as housekeeper on a lonely farm in N. Jersey. Her living quarters were in an apartment over the carriage house which took the place of the modern garage.

One day while Mrs. Foudy was alone at the farm with her children, an old-fashioned buggy turned in at the gate and in the buggy were two typical gypsies. The man, big and scowling, wore earrings in his ears as did the hard looking woman with him.

Remembering all the tales she had heard about the criminal habits of these wandering folk, Mrs. Foudy decided to be nice to them so that they would go their way and not molest her or her loved ones.

The gypsies asked for food for themselves and their horse, and the frightened mother hastened to do as they asked. She cooked a meal for the man and woman and gave some oats to their horse. The children stared wide-eyed at the strange couple, and their mother was relieved when the gypsies left.

It was in the month of August that she when the little [illegible] went to bed the boy was restless. In order to get a little air, Mrs. Foudy [illegible] and the door which was at the head of the stairs. She could see to the carriage house below.

Still she could not sleep. The little boy and girl were restless, too, and the mother noted the children [illegible] to the window where a [illegible] full moon shed its silvery beams over them. Soon they were asleep and Mrs. Foudy herself dozed off.

[illegible] disturbed the widow's rest. In her dreams she saw her [illegible] from her to be brought up in a life that was worse than death. The [illegible] between her and her children [illegible] and [illegible] and [illegible] Red.

[illegible] in the [illegible] and the next room she [illegible] was still moving. Her heart came [illegible] mouth, the way it had done in the dream, and she was [illegible] to supply a scream of horror.

There in the room, leaning over her babies' cot, was the gypsy! And he was picking up her little girl!

Mrs. Foudy says she couldn't believe her eyes. She pinched herself and stared in terror. It was true, the gypsy was stealing her baby girl!

Well, sir, Kipling says, "The female of the species is more deadly than the male," and, by golly, he's right. That is he's right when you monkey with the CHILDREN of the "female."

Mrs. Foudy is not so big and doesn't look dangerous at all. And that gypsy was plenty big. But the bigger they are the harder they fall when a mother is defending her young.

The [illegible] was a fierce-[illegible] fight out of bed. The kidnaper [illegible] but [illegible] her bare feet [illegible] make a sound and [illegible] on the [illegible] of the gypsy.

The man [illegible] to turn [illegible] but [illegible] of the [illegible] nails before he threw it. He dropped the baby and [illegible] adversary with a curse. He must have felt a wild [illegible] his back and he tried to reach her with his [illegible].

Some of the [illegible] it, but he [illegible] the mother. She had two advantages. She started the attack and defended her young cubs [illegible] and courage that is often irresistible. Besides, she had right on her side, and that means a lot in any fight.

The gypsy leaned back to get a better grip on the woman on his neck. Her weight caused him to lose his balance and he fell on his back with a crash that shook the house. By some miracle, Mrs. Foudy slipped out from under him as he fell. She was up on her feet in an instant, only starting to fight.

The gypsy staggered to his feet with a curse, and the widow saw her chance. The open door of the stairway was at his back. She threw her entire weight at him, and as he swayed pushed him quickly off balance. He tottered drunkenly—not knowing of the open door behind him. One more push and two hundred pounds of surprised gypsy went thundering head over heels down the stairs!

Mrs. Foudy slammed the door and bolted it. She waited breath easy for him to renew the attack.

But there was ONE gypsy who had had enough for one night. He didn't come back. Instead, Mrs. Foudy heard the buggy driven off into the night, and then sat down and had a good cry.

And so, boys and girls, I think I'll go to sleep now. But I'll be up in time to dish you out another true adventure tomorrow. So, then, Good Night.

Jean Hersholt has the role of a section hand who, in a small Tyrolean village, lives in close association with the two leading figures of the piece, Don Ameche and Allen Jenkins. Ameche plays one of the second Axel H. L. appearances, cast in the film "Half Angel" as well as the half-famous A. I. half of the team. Jean Dorsey gave an impressive performance. Miss Dee is the heroine and Dr. Don Ameche, Helen Westley and Lily Cahill complete the principal cast.

LEWIS HANEY ON RELIEF

Hopkins Attempts U. S. WHITEWASH IN Attack on Jersey

By LEWIS HANEY
(Professor of Economics, New York University)

New York, June 19—Harry Hopkins, Roosevelt's Works Progress administrator, has just issued a "report" on New Jersey relief work.

This report took two weeks' "field work," and then the "office work" in Washington and the publication costs. It adds another straw to the load on the camel's back of the nation's taxpayers. It is another waste.

Why this report?

Just two months ago the sovereign state of New Jersey decided she had had enough of federal waste and boondoggling. She disbanded her state emergency relief administration and took up the problem of dealing with her own local relief in her own way.

Incidentally, this got rid of the burden of supporting part of Hopkins' staff of "workers."

The report apparently is issued to prove that the Roosevelt-Hopkins system of centralized federal relief work Works Progress Administration is the best, and to criticize the New Jersey method.

I have not been able to get the world report, but it evidently finds that relief costs have been greatly reduced, the reduction running from 10 to 20 per cent in some localities up to cases in which the recipients of relief have been reduced from 200 to 5!

While Hopkins finds some localities retain the standards of the state emergency relief administration, he says that bad conditions have resulted in some cases. By the latter he appears to mean a return to direct relief as against so-called "work relief."

The Roosevelt-Hopkins system is committing the federal government to a policy of giving a larger share of the national income to the less competent persons who cannot get jobs at high wages. They admit that business cannot afford to pay wages that are not earned. They assert that the government can!

New Jersey has answered. New Jersey taxpayers have refused to be the goat.

What has been the result?

In the first place, there has been no "social revolution." (I happen to live in a New Jersey town, and I have not heard a peep.)

In the second place, there has been a big drop in relief "cases."

Some of those on the relief rolls promptly found jobs when their neighbors became responsible for the pay.

Others continued to do nothing, but did not show up to claim relief. It has been estimated that at least 10 per cent of those on relief are not in real need. In the town of New Brunswick, 151 "cases" out of 600 failed to appear after the locality took over.

Others were chiselers and were refused relief.

Hopkins cannot pass these facts off as being "seasonal." They are directly related to the change in relief methods.

In the third place, there has been a great saving in cost—my guess would be about 50 per cent. In New Brunswick on April 15 there were 600 cases, costing about $27,000 a month. On June 15 there were only 449 cases costing about $8000 a month.

Three persons do the work of supervision that it took 28 to do under Mr. Hopkins. The red tape, records, and reports to Washington are cut. There is less standardization according to formulae prescribed by "social workers." The job becomes one of common sense relief of necessity, not one of "wealth sharing" and giving high wages to people who cannot earn such wages.

In short, New Jersey has struck a blow at centralization and bureaucracy. She has taken a stand for local self-government and economy.

To my mind, it all comes down to human nature and common sense. It stands to reason that a bunch of politicians in Washington can't handle a bunch of more or less shiftless folks in Podunk. It stands to reason that the average man (forgotten or unforgotten) isn't going to live as economically or try as hard to get work. It stands to reason that there will be great waste, if not graft and political pressure—under the Roosevelt-Hopkins system.

And what about the taxes?

WOOL Goods Marts ACTIVE DURING PAST WEEK

New York, June 19—Wool goods markets were fairly active during the past week, according to the New York Wool Top Exchange Service. Mills succeeded in booking a substantial amount of business on men's fall suitings and topcoatings but prices were unsatisfactory.

Some business was booked on staple suitings and gabardines for the next spring season. Spot business was more active as clothing manufacturers laid in stocks in anticipation of better orders from retailers following the distribution of bonus money.

The Exchange Service said that the men's wear trade, both wholesale and retail, feels that sales of suits and sports wear during the summer months will be the heaviest ever, due to the stimulus of the bonus. Sales of suits at retail have been increasing since the first of the month, many stores succeeding in recouping losses suffered during May, which was a poor business month because of generally unseasonable weather.

Indications are that an active business will be done in wholesale clothing markets in the next few weeks and that this activity will be reflected in larger orders for piece goods.

Indications are that mills will open lines on spring suitings, topcoatings, tropical worsteds and flannels early next month. It is understood that some reservations have already been made on these lines by the large chain store operators. Prices are expected to show little change. Mills that have been pricing goods too high are expected to mark them down, while mills offering goods too cheaply are expected to advance prices.

Late this month, the United States Army will start purchasing its needs for next winter for itself and the Civilian Conservation Corps. More than 500,000 yards of serge, 700,000 pairs of wool socks and quantities of flannel shirts and wool trousers will be purchased by this arm of service beginning June 24. Further and larger purchases are expected to be made in July. Purchases by the army were one of the factors that contributed to the success of the industry last year.

Sales of women's fabrics showed a gain over the previous week. Meanwhile, garment manufacturers are beginning to show collections for fall and will not be in a position to re-order piece goods until retailers furnish them with more information as to what types of garments and cloths they intend to purchase. Business in knit wool goods was active.

Re-orders on wool swim suits were the largest in some months and many makers were compelled to turn them down because of inability to deliver them within the time limits specified.

ASSAILS Wheeler BILL SEE BUSINESS THREATENED

Universal Service

Washington, June 19—Charges that the privacy and independence of American business are threatened by the Wheeler bill giving the Federal Trade Commission inquisitorial powers were made today by Representative P. G. Holmes (R) of Massachusetts.

The measure, which has been passed by the Senate, is now before the House interestate and foreign trade committee and probably will be buried in the rush for adjournment by tomorrow night.

But, Senator Wheeler (D), of Montana, sponsor of the bill, said he had been assured by Representative Rayburn (D), of Texas, chairman of the House committee, that its passage would be forced early in the next session of Congress.

The bill empowers the commission to:

1—Initiate "fishing expedition" investigations into the private business affairs of any individual, group or corporation on its own motion.

2—Compel attendance of witnesses and production of all papers and documents the commission wants to see.

3—Demand prosecution of any person or corporation refusing to obey the commission's subpoena.

Representative Holmes emphasized the inherent danger in a further provision which says:

"Unfair methods of competition in commerce and unfair or deceptive acts and practices are hereby declared unlawful."

* * *

Denouncing this sweeping declaration, Holmes declared it would permit the Federal Trade Commission to justify "harassing persecution of any person or corporation" by continuous and unwarranted investigation on the plea that "unfair or deceptive acts" had been committed.

Holmes warned:

"Unlike the present standard of law, it places the burden of proof on the person or corporation and not on the commission, where it belongs."

He assailed as giving the commission "power to investigate anyone's private affairs," the following provisions:

"No person shall be excused from attending and testifying or from producing documentary evidence before the commission, or in obedience to the subpoena of the commission, on the ground or for the reason that the testimony or evidence, documentary or otherwise, required of him may tend to incriminate him or subject him to a penalty or forfeiture.

"But no natural person, having claimed his privilege against self-incrimination, prior to so testifying or actually producing such evidence, shall be prosecuted or subjected to any penalty or forfeiture for or on account of any transaction matter or thing concerning which he may testify or produce evidence documentary or otherwise before the commission in obedience to a subpoena issued by it."

Holmes declared that "by these harrassing methods" small firms, which could not afford the cost of continued investigation could be driven out of business.

BANK CLEARINGS INCREASE 9.2% Over Week of 1935

Further strength was displayed by bank clearings in the United States for the week ended Wednesday, June 17.

The total for twenty-two leading cities, as reported to Dun & Bradstreet, Inc., was $6,439,731,000, against $5,890,502,000 for the same week of last year, an increase of 9.2 per cent. This contrasted with a gain of 18.3 per cent in the week previous.

At New York City, the total of $4,306,720,000 reached the highest level in six weeks, and was 7.5 per cent in excess of the 1935 comparative.

Outside centers, with the single exception of the week ended January 8, displayed the highest aggregate since October 22, 1931. The amount for the current week was $2,133,011,000.

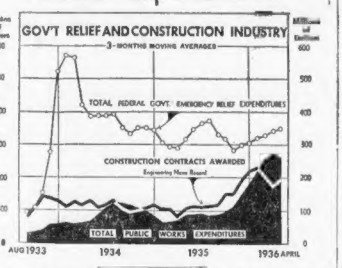
This was 13.1 per cent over the amount for the similar period of 1935.

The total for the past week increased $788,429,000 over the figure of the week preceding. For the two corresponding periods last year, a rise of $1,122,724,000 was recorded.

There were gains reported for all but two cities over the amounts for last year. The exceptions were Kansas City and Omaha, in which trifling declines appeared.

Foremost among the cities which reported increases were Cleveland, Cincinnati, Dallas, Pittsburgh, Detroit and Atlanta.

Federal Expenditures



The federal government's expenditures for public works projects is roughly equivalent to the total contracts awarded to contractors.

The heavy solid line shows the total monthly expenditures of the federal government for emergency purposes since the summer of 1933. The line at the bottom of the chart shows what portion of these expenditures has gone into public works. The thin line shows the construction contracts awarded, as reported by the Engineering News Record.

Although the total emergency expenditures have dropped considerably, it has not been at the expense of public works.

The federal government has been spending on an average of $361,000,000 a month since 1933. Of this amount, nearly $116,000,000 a month has gone into public works. The average monthly construction contracts awarded to private businesses since 1933 amount to roughly $134,000,000.

Wall Street Sidelights

New York, June 19—Successful completion of the Great Northern bond refunding operation has occasioned considerable discussion regarding the prospects for a similar undertaking by the Northern Pacific.

It is reported some plan will be worked out for the $106,000,000 of 6 per cent bonds of 2047 callable at 110. No action is possible, however, before October 1 next, since three months' notice is required prior to a call date. July 1 is the first date for such notice. The next is January 1, 1937. According to reports, President Donaldson of the railroad is on an inspection trip of the property accompanied by Jackson E. Reynolds, president of the First National Bank of New York. The latter institution handled the details of the Great Northern refunding.

Westinghouse Sales To Utilities Rise

According to reliable reports, a large percentage of the increased bookings reported by Westinghouse Electric represents central station equipment for utility companies. Demand for such machinery is said to have risen enormously this year. A big backlog of such potential buying at the same time is still being held back by political cat's paws and uncertainties, it is understood. Orders of all kinds booked by the company this year are 40 per cent in excess of the same 1935 period compared with a 38 per cent gain in the first quarter.

British Back Up Over Gold Curb

Restriction on dealings in gold coins in London, initiated upon the request of France, are not expected to remain in force very long, according to views in the British financial center. The British object strongly to the curb for two primary reasons: 1—It blocks the hoarding facilities to the small man, who is the only one left a entire freedom in the bullion market. 2—It injures British prestige as an international market. The market is largely lost to foreign centers and what remains is driven into the hands of unscrupulous dealers not directly under the influence of the Bank of England, which issued the request. Another no less important attitude is that much broader issues are involved than financial technicalities, that is, interference with private activities. Traditional British resentment has been aroused by this latter principle.

American Alcohol Salaries, Profits

An anonymous reader of this newspaper calls attention to some data in the annual report for 1935 of the American Commercial Alcohol Corporation filed with the Securities & Exchange Commission on Form 10 K which will interest stockholders. The following expenses and salaries are listed:

Russell P. Brown, president	$33,288
Henry C. Cole, vice-pres.-treas.	18,000
Walter P. Stowe, vice-president	15,833
Fourteen directors	57,658
Thirteen officers of subsidiaries	111,586
S. D. Liedsdorf & Co., account-ants	78,092
Larkin, Rathbone & Perry, counsel	21,786
Sales commissioners
American Distributors, Inc.	78,760
Famous Brands, Ohio, Inc.	81,000
Famous Brands, Inc.	69,800
Richard H. Grimm & Co.	37,722
Walter P. Stowe, vice-president	15,833
William C. Kiely	36,796
Wm. Steinberg Corporation	11,584
Total	$758,891

This total is equivalent to $2.91 a share on the 260,878 shares of common stock of $20 par value outstanding with the public. (None of the $100 par value preferred stock is outstanding.) The consolidated net profit for 1935 amounted to $203,412, or 78 cents a share of common stock.

Dividend

Niles-Bement-Pond Co. declared a dividend of 50 cents, payable July 15 to stock of record July 9. This marks resumption of dividends, the last previous payment having been 15 cents on March 31, 1932.

Wall Street Hears

New York, June 19 (INS)—That total liquor withdrawals this year may exceed 100,000,000 gallons, against 76,988,000 in 1935.

That Schenley distillers (SHN) should earn around $1.45 a common share for the first half of the year.

MONEY Policy Still VAGUE GOLD RETURN UNLIKELY

By MERRYLE STANLEY RUKEYSER
Copyright, 1936, by Universal Service

New York, June 19—The state of flux in present day thinking about monetary affairs is revealed in the fact that neither of the two major parties is likely to advocate an unqualified return to the orthodox gold standard.

It may be taken for granted that the Democratic party will indorse the current quasi managed currency policy of the Roosevelt administration, in which convertibility of currency into gold is prohibited and under which gold is made available for export only by license for settling legitimate foreign balances.

Under the present setup, the gold content of the dollar was cut once by executive order, and the President has discretionary right to make a further restricted cut in the gold content.

The Republican monetary plank fell so far short of advocating a definite return to the orthodox gold standard that the nominee for the presidency fell called upon to interpret this plank before he received the nomination.

In seeking to be more definite, Governor Alf M. Landon, in his famous telegram, insisted that the second requisite of a sound and stable currency "is a currency expressed in terms of gold and convertible into gold."

But Governor Landon, in leaving open the question of timing, added: "I recognize, however, that the second requisite must not be made effective until such time as it can be done without penalizing our domestic economy and without failure to our producers of agricultural products and other raw materials."

Thus we have the spectacle of neither of the major parties committed to a prompt and unqualified resumption of the orthodox pre-depression gold standard.

Why?

One answer is that the conditions for the proper working out of the theoretical international gold standard are non-existent, in a world that has turned from free trade to more or less international nationalism.

Professor Gustav Cassel, Swedish economist, who has been weaned away from the gold standard, contends that it did not work automatically even before the war, but was in fact managed by Downing Street and the Bank of England.

In the newest volume entitled "The Downfall of the Gold Standard," Professor Cassel indicates why he was converted from belief in the gold standard to his ideas of a managed currency.

Professor Cassel takes the controversial view that there is a gold shortage, and he predicts that the existing maldistribution of gold among the nations militates against facilitating the interchange of goods and services.

Money and credit should come into being as a necessity for actual goods, and commercial bank credit should not be shunted into capital loans, which should come out of the real savings, or unconsumed goods, of the people.

Mortgage Legislation Urged

Washington, June 19 (AP)—Legislation for government supervision of bondholders' protective committees and others who handle liquidation of defaulted real estate securities for the bondholders was suggested to the House today by a special investigating committee.

Headed by Representative Sabath (D.), Illinois, the committee reported that "disclosures indicate gross fraud and dishonesty, and apparent income-tax evasion, warranting the scrutiny of the Department of Justice and the Bureau of Internal Revenue."

A bill Sabath has been approved by the House judiciary committee. It would make the controller of the currency a "conservator" to act as a friend of the bondholders in bankruptcy actions.

Today's report said:

"The committees finds many investments and investors. Investors are responsible for unloading dishonest securities on the public and it is they who are now the chief factors in this racket by which most of these aggregately 5,000,000 people are being defrauded of their investments by so-called protective committees, and the unjust and inequitable reorganizations which they foist upon their victimized investors."

World Zinc Up

American Bureau of Metal Statistics reports May world zinc production at 137,883 tons, against 121,387 in April and 123,807 in May, 1935. Five months' production was 654,396 tons, against 600,471 in like 1935 period.

Trustees Named For Old Colony

Despite strenuous opposition, United States District Court Judge Carroll Hincks appointed as trustees for the Old Colony Railroad the same men who are administering the affairs of the New York, New Haven & Hartford Railroad. They are Howard S. Palmer, president of the New Haven system; James Lee Loomis of Hartford and Winthrop Daniels of New York.

R. A. Cutter, Boston, representing the Old Colony Railroad, a subsidiary of the New Haven Railroad, requesting reorganization under Section 77 of the National Bankruptcy Act, argued for the appointment of independent trustees.

Others who appeared in favor of trustees other than those now administering the New Haven Railroad, were Alfred Gardiner, representing the State Street Trust Co., Boston; Harold Staples of the Rhode Island Hospital Trust, Providence, and also counsel for the Manhattan Co. of New York.

Fred M. Oliver of Boston, however, representing a group of mutual savings banks in Massachusetts owning $9,400,000 in Old Colony bonds, appeared in favor of naming the same trustees.

In overruling objections, Judge Hincks said:

"The administration of the New Haven system is full of conflicts. Congress intended that the courts should have the benefit of having a single trustee for all subsidiaries so that there would be no opposition from conflicting elements."

Keystone Steel

Directors of Keystone Steel & Wire Co. adjourned meeting held in Peoria Tuesday until July 1 when they will consider common dividend due to be paid August 1. Directors at meeting Tuesday voted to change the next payment date from July 15 to August 1.

WHAT SUBJECT

Excites PEOPLE Most?

By B. C. FORBES

What subject most occupies the minds of Americans today?

Judging by the flow of communications to this column, the relationships between government and business — current problems of political economy — easily lead.

Some progress clearly has been made during recent years in bringing home to the people that each daily bread is intimately bound up with, dependent upon, the activities of industrial and agricultural producers, of that government behaviour exercises an important influence in helping or hurting the national welfare.

Two years ago and even one year ago the percentage of abusive condemnatory, vitriolic letters indicating this writer was very much larger than it has been lately. The New Deal has steadily lost defenders.

Recently one note has been struck by a notably large number of letter-writers, namely, appeals for business leaders to come out and proclaim their views and fight vigorously to contemporaries against re-entrenching the New Deal for another four years.

Extracts from typical letters follow:

U. L. Higham: "Sometimes I wonder if business men really mean business. If they would take off their coats and show their employes tactfully, and everyone else, that the very foundations of our country are being undermined, and not be afraid, we would make dust fly. If they would put the same energy into winning this campaign that they put into their business, I am confident we could shortly turn the tide against the Utopia dreamers in the executive mansion."

E. L. Phillips: "Every honest employer should give serious thought to selling himself and his country to his men. Practically every worker who is in an upset frame of mind is that way because of lack of clear understanding of how business is conducted by honest American employers."

James Wolfert: "Why do not business men all over the country make a real effort to beat Roosevelt? We get a pain-killing matter sent out daily, in statements, bills, letters, etc., that business as a whole is faced with regimentation on an unprecedented scale if Roosevelt is re-elected."

* * *

H. Clay Norman: "American people have been reading the junk you put out until they are getting nauseated. The Real Dealers are doing nothing more than trying to protect the helplessly exploited American citizens from the criminal-minded cephalopods (fillers of pay envelopes). You ask: 'How long must some 10 million unemployed and 20 million breadline unfortunates, etc.' Here is the answer: Until labor is sufficiently organized in every occupation to properly protect itself, and demand a fair, adequate share of what it has produced."

* * *

J. R. Greenlees: "You emphasize the fact that laboring men throughout the country are being taxed excessively, but you fail to call attention to the fact that these taxes are levied, not for the support of the government, but to raise money to pay to other citizens not to produce foods and supplies needed by the people."

* * *

A Reader: "I do not believe enough stress has been placed on the fact that life insurance companies, others, too, I presume) have millions of dollars invested in operating utility companies. Owning a life insurance policy, anything that affects its status hurts me up. If insurance policyholders would but realize how they are being directly and indirectly affected by such government threats as TVA, they would most certainly become greatly alarmed and demand that a stop be put to such experiments."

Charles Simpson (74), Yakima, Wash.: "We people of the Northwest have suffered since June, 1929. The people of Yakima valley—the producers—have not been able to pay taxes and running expenses. Many have lost their homes. Now we can see no one ray of hope—that is in the Townsend plan."

The Solution Is Landon

The World-Telegram, a Scripps-Howard paper, ardently supporting the New Deal, complains of "the most rapidly mounting expense in our history."

The ignorance, extravagance and confusion which the World-Telegram now denounces are characteristic of the New Deal. They will always be the same under the present Administration. Roosevelt will always be Roosevelt. A duck will always lay a duck egg. If you want a different kind of egg you will have to get a different kind of bird to lay it.

(Reprinted from New York World-Telegram of June 3.)

WHAT'S THE RUSH?

FOR TWO YEARS, in the face of the most rapidly mounting expense in our history, the slam-bang, stop-gap, Happy Hooligan technique of tax legislation has been employed.

Here has been the procedure: Congress meets. Assurances proclaimed that there would be no need for tax legislation this session. Weeks and months roll along. Hot weather arrives. The Congressional eye becomes fixed on adjournment. Then —a tax message! Surprise party! Hurried routing out of the experts! Bum's rush!

Remember the "we'll pass it in six days" performance of 1935? And the same sort, with variations, this year?

Result: A mess of confusion, ignorance and irritation. Accordingly, no matter how the present tax bill finally comes out, it will raise less than a tenth of the year's expense, and will be half-baked in so far as the whole broad problem of internal revenue is concerned.

IT IS TIME to call a halt on the hit-and-miss and to turn scientific for a change. A complete overhauling of our whole taxation system is long overdue.

The procedure is simple. Before Congress adjourns let there be a subcommittee appointed, made up of members from the House Ways and Means and the Senate Finance Committees. This body to go to work immediately, with Treasury Department and Joint Taxation Committee experts—and to keep working until the 1937 Congress convenes. Then to report.

Thoroughness, hard labor, intelligence, the long-haul approach, plenty of time and application —those qualities injected in proper proportion can serve the nation well in this time of fiscal distress. To set in motion such a program would be statesmanship of the highest type. To fail to do so would be just another disheartening demonstration of irresponsibility.

THE QUESTION of relief has not been met by voting a $1,425,000,000 blank check to the President. If the President thinks that criticism of his relief administration is petty or partisan he is badly misinformed. There is a widespread, informed and honest questioning of relief practices and policies. This present Congress should create a non-partisan and expert commission, arm it with money and power to study the whole relief picture throughout the country, authorize it to bring in a report on the facts and a suggested long-range policy for the next Congress to follow. Our present relief policy is that of the ostrich.

The National Defense
On the Sea

THERE WERE three compelling reasons why Congress should have made liberal appropriations for the Navy.

1—The so-called naval limitations treaties of Washington and London were being "sunk without trace."

2—Relying fatuously upon the "moral" phases of these treaties, our Government since 1920 had shamefully neglected to build up the Navy to our authorized strength.

3—The virtual disappearance of the ideal of limitation of armaments by international agreement emphasized the ominous fact that OTHER COUNTRIES WERE STEADILY BUILDING BETTER AND STRONGER NAVIES WHILE WE NEGLECTED OUR OWN.

Even Russia has a formidable naval program, and Germany—left by the World War with a mere "skeleton" navy—is AGAIN A POWER.

VESSELS "built and projected" are commonly used in computing naval comparisons.

However, a battle cannot be waged with blueprints. Gross tonnages in actual service represent the naval forces available for immediate combat.

Likewise, naval experts usually speak in terms of "categories"—a Power, they say, has so many capital ships, so many cruisers, etc.

That is useful to the tacticians. But gross tonnages tell the main story, nonetheless.

And the main story is this:

America's historic sea policy, with two oceans to command, is based upon the principle of "A Navy second to none."

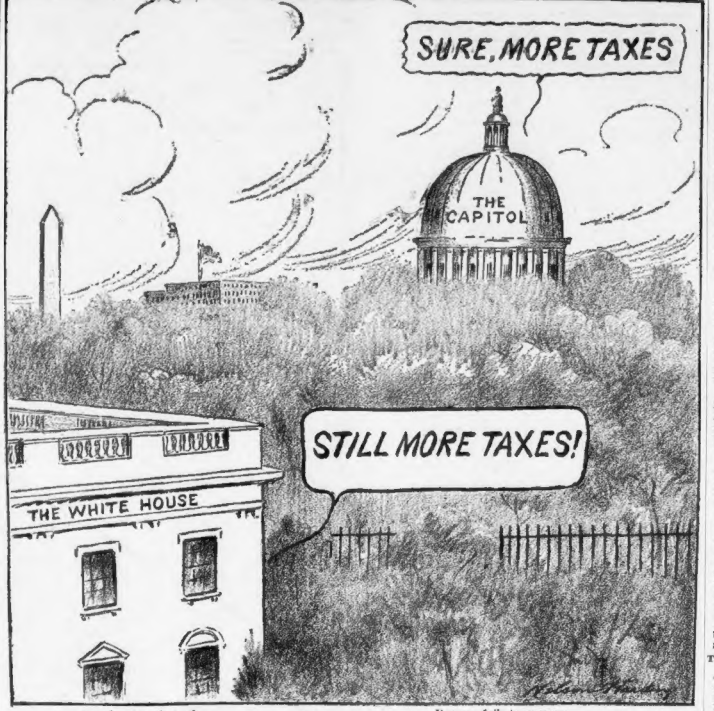
In actual tonnage, available at any hour for defense, we ARE and HAVE BEEN second to the British Empire, and not far ahead of Japan.

Moreover, Japan outclasses us, according to some experts, in ESSENTIAL, FAST AND POWERFUL FIGHTING SHIPS.

Obviously, America needs fast and formidable FIGHTING SHIPS for defense.

That Washington Echo!

By Nelson Harding



An almost perfect echo,
A long reverberation
Comes from the dome that marks
The head town of the nation.

It never fails to answer;
And almost word for word
Faithfully repeating
The orders it has heard.

The Campaign Issues

Human Side of the News

By Edwin C. Hill

THE GLOBE TROTTER OF HEARST METROTONE NEWS

Edwin C. Hill

All the world's a political stage! Now and until November the American people will have eyes to see and ears to hear nothing but the words of Landon and Roosevelt, and tongues to talk nothing but the campaign. And what a campaign it is going to be!

Few times, if any, in our history have we had such a multitude of issues. They reach out into every nook and corner of the country and into every farm and fireside. Not the least is that old standby, that dominant theme of many a campaign of the past—the tariff.

I got it from all sides in Cleveland: "About time he did it," a New Englander remarked to me. He meant President Roosevelt's action in lifting the rate against Japanese textiles.

"A fine how do you do," said a Chicagoan, "that we have to import 800,000 pounds of pork in one month from one country and that we are eating sausage from the Danube out here in our own Middle West."

The tariff links up with the Administration's curtailment of farm production in the Republican strategy. George Peek, who went into President Roosevelt's official family to work out a farm program, has made out a most damaging case against the Wallace-Tugwell economy of scarcity and against the Hull-Sayre program of internationalism. It is not without significance that Mr. Wallace is talking at present in the vein that crop curtailment is not a permanent program, but that it may be given up now that an emergency has passed.

THE FARMERS' CONCERN

The academic Cordell Hull of Tennessee is a tenacious individual. He was and always will be, no doubt, an advocate of the League of Nations, just as he was an advocate of Prohibition before, through and after the Democratic Convention in Chicago in 1932. They tell you in Washington that he is the most independent of the cabinet officers and that he is going through with his theory that the way to promote peace is to eliminate economic barriers.

The theory may be fine, but the method of breaking down the barriers is another question. A question which is a matter of concern today to the farmer. The farmer knows, and we will know a lot better when the Republican orators get through with him, how agricultural products from abroad are pouring into the American market. And it just stands to reason that the American consumer at some time or other is going to rebel quite strongly against paying the European farmer for produce what the American farmer is being paid not to produce.

The Middle West looks like the battleground in this campaign. And the Administration's cause will not be helped there by incessant and heavy hammering home of the attack against crop curtailment and unprotected farm markets. Henry Ford has said that in his opinion it makes little difference who is President, but at the same time he has branded crop-curtailment as "worse than thievery," adding that "people are fatheads to let them get away with it."

Ford comes out for the economy of plenty against the economy of scarcity which the Brain Trust of the New Deal inaugurated.

"There is only one security," he says, "and that is plenty. The minute you make produce cheap, some one will make new uses for it. If the farmers allow land to lie idle, they'll suffer."

ANSWERS DEMANDED

Senator Steiwer's "Three Long Years" got the Republican Convention to cheering and singing, but, "Seven cents a pound for potatoes in New York" will be a more difficult slogan for the Administration to handle, as will the cry of the Republican candidates in the Midwest: "Preserve the American market for the American farmer."

Here is the table the Administration must answer:

Should the American farmer have produced these commodities?

Will he produce them in the future?

Will the tide of agricultural imports be checked?

The side which wins the debate on these questions will gain an advantage which may be decisive.

New York Day by Day

By O. O. McIntyre

O. O. McIntyre

New York, June 19—Thought while strolling: What's become of all the colors we used to know—greens, browns and blues? For instance—the new summer shades: pago, copper, henna, toasty willow. Add imperial looking ladies' names. Mrs. Jane Tibbett. For political color, Mrs. Vivion—the fellow Zioncheck. For the Look the Same as They Did 15 Years Ago Club: Harry Staton. How tacky the avenue grows! Babe Ruth has taken retirement with a becoming grace. Imagine England tolerating some of our crooked judges. Always a glamour about a Pullman porter. What became of Gandhi?

Title for a short story: "A Blind Date at 80." No matter how they twist the dime receiver on buses, conductors always hold it wrong. Those curious inspecting couples on the avenue after nightfall. Not rural window shoppers, but dress designers swiping ideas.

That angry, desperate way women in hat shops jerk off the one they don't like. And never a farewell glance. No sound more soothing than the far-away click of wood on wood in a bowling alley. The next longest ear-rings in the world are worn by Inez Haynes Irwin.

Mrs. Belloc-Lowndes sounds as though she might be made of jelly. And she's a ringer for Victoria. The Times says Annabelle Lee is a must-know poem. It's the maudlinest ever written. Zzz ha.

Fifth avenue's conservative merchants who are in the majority are becoming increasingly concerned over the fly-by-nighters who take over empty stores and give them a bannered blatancy that suggests the deep Bowery.

Mostly they are "linen stores" and never are the names of the owners displayed. The customer has no redress if dissatisfied. Anyway, they seldom remain more than a few weeks. Their windows display the high grade established article. But they are only for the windows—the stuff on sale is shoddy.

And Park avenue had a duck fit over the possibility of a movie house in an arcade planned for the fabulous 50's. Application for a license has been denied after round robins of protests were circulated among tenants in the surrounding buildings. Park avenue believes one movie like the speck in the barrel of apples means quick decay. It is already thinly flecked with vulgar trade.

Being a small property owner on Park avenue I am for that reason alone opposed to commercial invasion. But secretly I am for living over a store, next door to a movie or even a marathon dance hall. I never visit the lower East Side without a wince of envy for those placid, window-leaning figures above the shops.

From the sidewalk there is generally visible a canary. And on the window ledge a white poodle several weeks in bath arrears. The battledoor and shuttlecock talk from window to window is always pitched in exciting tempo. Tots dash about in screaming play until midnight. No community living seems more fun. More of give and take. Everything external and childlike.

Grantland Rice, aside from being one of the newspapermen with great earning capacity, is among the most popular. Aside from his syndicated newspaper column and editing a golf magazine, his film sport shorts are in high favor. Rice, Tennessee born, came to the old Evening Mail via Atlanta 23 years ago with a cherubic smile, ruddy cheeks and a southern accent which he has never lost. His hair has not been so loyal.

Listen, World!

By Elsie Robinson

Elsie Robinson

Does life hurt you? Does its confusion bewilder you—does its cruelty dishearten you? Do you somehow feel an outsider to it all — homeless, even though you live in the house chosen with the friends you love? Then you ARE homeless, for if your spirit is restless, if your spirit is not at home, it matters little how comfortable your body may be Elsie Robinson in its earthly address.

Yet your spirit may find a home, even in the midst of the confusion that you hate.

Once life hurt another man as it is now hurting you. He was a gentle soul, a teacher named Sidney Lanier. He was very poor and he was slowly dying of tuberculosis. Consequently he was tortured by physical pain and the thought of how little he could do for those he loved.

To comfort himself he made poetry. And, toward the end of his life, he wrote a poem which must sustain every buffeted soul who reads it.

HE FOUND A HOME

He had gone into the South, to a place where the marshes stretched, vast and silent, to the sea. More than ever, life was nagging at him, shrilling its terror into his ears. Perhaps you can guess how terribly his cracked spirit longed for peace—for that peace which is like a home.

And there, in the quiet marshes of Glynn, he seemed to find that home. For there was something about those marshes, a brooding Presence, that was like a Friend whom he had lost and found again . . . like a strong, quiet Friend in whom his soul could rest.

So in that blessed rest which came before his death, Sidney Lanier wrote a poem called "The Marshes of Glynn," of which this is one verse:

"As the marsh-hen secretly builds on the watery sod,
Behold I will build me a nest on the greatness of God;
I will fly in the greatnesses of God as the marsh-hen flies
In the freedom that fills all the space 'twixt the marsh and the skies;
By so many roots as the marsh-
grass sends in the sod
I will heartily lay me a-hold on the greatness of God:
Oh, like to the greatness of God is the greatness within
The range of the marshes, the liberal marshes of Glynn."

A REFUGE FOR YOU

Are you weary and troubled? Homesick for a peace you lost long, long ago? Then reach out and find your home.

Reach out beyond the noise and confusion that surround you—

Beyond life's racket and worry and pain—

Out, out, until the little noises of the world fade away and presently your spirit comes into that vast silence that broods above our small, distracted lives.

That vast and living Presence which stretches out and out into the everlasting mysteries, as the marshes of Glynn stretched out and out to the sea.

THEN REST WITHIN THAT SILENCE—AND BUILD YOU A NEST "ON THE GREATNESS OF GOD."

The Landon Faith

By Merryle Stanley Rukeyser

In his intimate and now-famous chat with the graduates of Attica High School, Governor Alfred M. Landon recreated the America of self-reliant, pioneering, enterprising men and women.

In his character and his record, Mr. Landon represents a symbolic protest against perpetuation of boondoggling.

He epitomizes the revival of faith and confidence after the economic storm.

He offers the sensible formula of renewed progress through thrift and industry.

Landon shuns panaceas, schemes of wonder workers and other evidences of the blue sky spirit in public affairs.

Landon represents a call for continued American progress in tune with the American tradition.

TRUE AMERICANISM

Unspoiled by the "New Economics," Landon shows his kinship to the American type as previously exemplified by Benjamin Franklin, Ralph Waldo Emerson, Washington, Lincoln and the other great men who were actuated by confidence in the capacity of the individual.

He represents a protest against the current delusion that, though frugality is desirable in private life, waste, inefficiency and prodigal spending are virtues in governmental activity.

Landon speaks for the vast, inarticulate group of self-supporting Americans, who seek neither dole nor special benefits.

These fine citizens expect to trade efficient work for tokens bringing a good standard of living.

These 40,000,000 gainfully employed persons and their dependents know that before wealth can be distributed it must be created.

They are not lulled to sleep by the alien doctrine that division of existing wealth, rather than multiplication of new wealth, is the way to the good life.

PEOPLE'S SPOKESMAN

Landon expresses the quiet wishes of these useful citizens. He aspires to be no superman.

His leadership lies in awakening his fellow citizens to their own rich potentialities.

They keynote of his philosophy was given in his remark: "AMERICA IS STILL OUR PROMISED LAND IF WE HAVE THE QUALITIES OF HEART AND HEAD TO MAKE IT SO."

His confidence is based on no ephemeral proposals for manipulating the currency or inflating credit.

On the contrary, he insists on prudent management of public finances as a condition precedent to the new era of accelerated well-being for the average citizen.

He perceives the coming prosperity in terms of an honest exchange of the products of the hours of labor of citizens in complementary occupations.

He sees wealth coming from the mines, the forests and the farms—fabricated and transformed by the energies of men, aided by the improved tools perfected by science and invention.

A NOTABLE ADDRESS

Landon is thinking is far afield from the "Patent Medicine" schemes of the immature New Dealers and the political promoter, who foster the illusion that popular welfare hinges on looting the public treasury and on robbing Peter to pay Paul.

The defeatists now in control deny the opportunities for widespread new investment and for continued economic progress.

Landon has a wiser intuitive sense.

He knows that human enterprise and ingenuity never sleep, and that out of the welter of confusion and frustration will emerge a better day in the United States.

Landon, with his devotion to sound arithmetic, is equipped to lead the country out of the wilderness of contradictory objectives and false motivation.

His simple words to the 28 graduates of the Attica High School became a significant State paper for the American people.

Memories of Childhood

Written Before Her Death

By Winifred Black

The little boy in the next block ran away from home the other day. As a matter of fact, he only stayed a few hours, but he looks a little different this morning. He is sort of old and worldly wise and just a bit discouraged, don't you know.

I ran away from home once—no, I ran away two or three times. I didn't stay but a few hours, but I remember every minute of those hours.

Well, the first time I ran away, I told the woman who was pretending to be my mother at the time that I was going. It was something she had said about the way I didn't comb my hair or something, and I felt I could no longer endure her hateful tyranny.

Of course, everyone else thought she was my real mother, but I knew better. I knew my real mother wouldn't care whether I combed my hair or not. So I decided to run away and look for my real mother. My pretended mother smiled pleasantly and advised me to wait a few minutes until she could put up a good luncheon for me.

"You might get hungry," she said. But this did not soften my heart; for some weird reason it hardened my heart. And off I went over the big fence and far away.

Finally I stumbled right on the edge of a dark pool. I didn't get up again, but lay there on the ground sobbing and crying and thinking how sorry they all would be when they found me there cold and dead with my poor little hands folded over my broken heart.

As I burst into a new wail at the thought of this particular scene, I suddenly noticed a strange quivering in the air. It was a sort of rhythmetic affair, like the pendulum of a clock. Yes, there he was, little black and brown Boss. He had come to find me.

He pulled at my little skirts and made me understand he wanted me to go home with him. Broken and weary, I went—not to please myself, oh, no, but to please the little dog.

It was only a few minutes till we were back home again. I went over the fence and he went under, and there on the porch sewing, right where she could get a good view of the corn field, sat the pretended mother. She did not seem at all surprised to see me. She just smiled and said:

"Run upstairs, child, and wash your face and hands, and be sure and leave your shoes out on the porch. They really are dreadfully muddy, aren't they? There's strawberry shortcake for dinner."

I rushed down the stairs and in an instant's time I was in my mother's arms. I knew then, once and for all, that she was my real mother and not a pretended mother at all. After that I never was stubborn or willful with her again.
